34 SOUTHAMPTON STREET STRAND LONDON

All this is pleasant, but there are two poems that are much more— The High Tide and The Coming in of the Mer-maiden. The High Tide is best printed with modern spelling inasmuch as though it pretends to be a tale told at her spinning-wheel by a woman in the sixteenth century it is manifestly a tale written at her desk by a woman in the nineteenth. The level sun like ruddy ore" a figure dark against day's golden death" the image of the rearing Landis met by the tidal wave shaped like a curling snow-white cloud" and the sobbing river"—all these are unmistakably modern but not to be complained of unless when the author spells up uppe". The High Tide has the rare quality of simple dramatic narrative of action. Assuredly nothing could be better told than this—

So far so fast the eygre drove
The heart had hardly time to beat,
Before a shallow seething wave
Saddled in the grasses at our feet
The feet had hardly time to flee
Before it brake against the knee
And all the world was in the sea.

Yet finer if finer could be—the briefest most active most spacious lines—follow—

That flew strewn wrecks about the grass,
That ebb swept out the flocks to sea.

The Boston bells ceasing not to ring the tune of dismay, "The Brides of Enderby", fill the stanzas with a changing, swelling, and hurrying music that is most beautiful, and the whole poem gives a kind of reluctant proof of the degree of true and legitimate art of which this poet was capable, but to which she seldom set her hand in earnest

Jean Ingelow is imitable in the fashion she set, of doves, milking-pails, daisies, and weather (with its few rhymes)—a fashion of which the day is long over-past. But she is not imitable in the brief masterly passages of her best and more truly memorable lyrics

An empty sky a world of heather Purple of foxglove, yellow of broom We two among them wading together Shaking out honey treading perfume.

Crowds of bees are giddy with clover • Crowds of grasshoppers skip at our feet, Crowds of larks at their matins hang over Thanking the Lord for a life so sweet.

Flusheth the rise with her purple favour Gloweth the cleft with her golden ring Twixt the two brown butterflies waver Lightly settle and sleepily swing

We two walk till the purple dieth
And short dry grass under foot is brown
But one little streak at a distance lieth Green like a ribbon to prank the down.

DIVIDED

II

Over the grass we stepped unto it, And God He knoweth how blithe we were!

Never a voice to bid us eschew it Hey the green ribbon that showed so fair!

Hey the green ribbon! we kneeled beside it,

We parted the grasses dewy and sheen, Drop over drop there filtered and slid A tiny bright beck that trickled between Tinkle, tinkle, sweetly it sung to us, Light was our talk as of faëry bells—Faery wedding-bells faintly rung to us Down in their fortunate parallels

Hand in hand, while the sun peered over, We lapped the grass on that youngling spring,
Swept back its rushes, smoothed its clover,
And said, "Let us follow it westering"

III

A dappled sky, a world of meadows, Circling above us the black rooks fly Forward, backward, lo, their dark shadows Flit on the blossoming tapestry—

DIVIDED

Flit on the beck for her long grass parteth As hair from a maid a bright eyes blown back

And lo the sun like a lover darteth His flattering smile oo her wayward track.

Sing on! we sing in the glorious weather Till one steps over the tlay strand
So narrow in sooth that still together On either brink we go hand in hand.

The beck grows wider the hands must sever

On either margin our songs all done
We move apart while she singeth ever • Taking the course of the stooping sun

He prays "Come over"—I may not follow
I cry "Return"—but he cannot come We speak we laugh but with voices hollow

Our hands are hanging our hearts are numb

IV

A breathing sigh a sigh for answer
A little talking of outward things
The careless beck is a merry dancer Keeping sweet time to the air she sings.

DIVIDED

A little pain when the beck grows wider,
"Cross to me now—for her wavelets swell "

"I may not cross"—and the voice beside her Faintly reacheth, though heeded well

No backward path, ah! no returning,
No second crossing that ripple's flow
"Come to me now, for the west is burning, Come ere it darkens,"—" Ah, no! ah, no!"

Then cries of pain, and arms outreaching—The beck grows wider and swift and deep Passionate words as of one beseeching—The loud beck drowns them, we walk, and weep

A yellow moon in splendour drooping,
A tired queen with her state oppressed,
Low by rushes and swordgrass stooping, Lies she soft on the waves at rest

The desert heavens have felt her sadness, Her earth will weep her some dewy
tears,
The wild beck ends her tune of gladness,
And goeth stilly as soul that fears

DIVIDED

We two walk on in our grassy places
On either marge of the moonlit flood With the moon's own sadness in our faces Where joy is withered, blossom and bud.

VI

A shady freshness, chafers whirring
A little piping of leaf-hid birds
A flutter of wings, a fitful stirring A cloud to the eastward snowy as curds.

Bare grassy slopes, where kids are tethered

Round valleys like nests all ferny-lined Round hills, with fluttering tree-tops feathered

Swell high in their freckled robes behind.

A rose flush tender a thrill a quiver When golden gleams to the tree-tops glide

A flashing edge for the milk white river
The beck, a river—with still sleek tide.

Broad and white and polished as silver On she goes under fruit laden trees Sunk in leafage cooeth the culver And plaineth of love's disloyalties.

DIVIDED

Glitters the dew and shines the river,
Up comes the lily and dries her bell,
But two are walking apart for ever,
And wave their hands for a mute farewell

A braver swell, a swifter sliding,
The river hasteth, her banks recede Wing-like sails on her bosom gliding Bear down the lily and drown the reed

Stately prows are rising and bowing (Shouts of mariners winnow the air), And level sands for banks endowing
The tiny green ribbon that showed so fair

While, O my heart! as white sails shiver,
And crowds are passing, and banks stretch wide,
How hard to follow, with lips that quiver,
That moving speck on the far-off side!

Farther, farther—I see it—know it—My eyes brim over, it melts away Only my heart to my heart shall show it As I walk desolate day by day

VIII

And yet I know past all doubting truly—A knowledge greater than grief can dim—
I know as he loved, he will love me duly—
Yea, better—e'en better than I love him

And as I walk by the vast calm river
The awful river so dread to see,
I say Thy breadth and thy depth for ever Are bridged by his thoughts that cross to me."

Honours

PART I

A Scholar is musing on his want of success

To strive—and fail Yes, I did strive and fail,

I set mine eyes upon a certain night
To find a certain star—and could not hail With them its deep-set light

Fool that I was! I will rehearse my fault

I, wingless, thought myself on high to lift

Among the winged—I set these feet that halt

To run against the swift

And yet this man, that loved me so, can write—

That loves me, I would say, can let me
see,

Or fain would have me think, he counts but light

These Honours lost to me

HONOURS

The Letter of his friend

What are they? that old house of yours which gave Such welcomes oft to me, the sunbeams fall
Still down the squares of blue and white which pave
 Its hospitable hall.

A brave old house! a garden full of bees Large dropping poppies and Queen hollocks
With butterflies for crowns—tree peonies
 And pinks and goldlocks.

Go when the shadow of your house is long Upon the garden—when some new waked bird Pecking and fluttering chirps a sudden song
 And not a leaf is stirred

But every one drops dew from either edge
Upon its fellow while an amber ray Slants up among the tree-tops like a wedge Of liquid gold—to play

HONOURS

“Over and under them, and so to fall Upon that lane of water lying below—
That piece of sky let in, that you do call A pond, but which I know

“To be a deep and wondrous world, for I Have seen the trees within it—marvellous things
So thick no bird betwixt their leaves could fly

But she would smite her wings,— “Go there, I say, stand at the water’s brink,

And shoals of spotted grayling you shall
see Basking between the shadows—look, and think

‘This beauty is for me,

“‘For me this freshness in the morning hours,
For me the water’s clear tranquillity,
For me the soft descent of chestnut flowers,
The cushat’s cry for me,

“‘The lovely laughter of the wind-swayed wheat,
The easy slope of yonder pastoral hill,

The sedgey brook whereby the red kine meet

And wade and drink their fill.

Then saunter down that terrace whence the sea

All fair with wing-like sails you may discern

Be glad, and say This beauty is for me—

A thing to love and learn

For me the bounding in of tides for me
The laying bare of sands when they retreat

The purple flush of calms the sparkling glee

When waves and sunshine meet.

So after gazing homeward turn and mount

To that long chamber in the roof there tell

Your heart the laid up lore it holds to count

And prize and ponder well.

The lookings onward of the race before It had a past to make it look behind

HONOURS

Its reverent wonders, and its doubtings sore,
 Its adorations blind,

“The thunder of its war-songs, and the glow
 Of chants to freedom by the old world sung,
The sweet love cadences that long ago Dropped from the old-world tongue

“And then this new-world lore that takes account
 Of tangled star-dust, maps the triple whirl Of blue and red and argent worlds that
 And greet the IRISH EARI,

“Or float across the tube that HERSCHEL sways,
 Like pale-rose chaplets, or like sapphire mist,
Or hang or droop along the heavenly ways,
 Like scarves of amethyst

“O strange it is and wide the new-world lore,
 For next it treateth of our native dust”

HONOURS

Must dig out buried monsters and explore The green earth's fruitful crust

Must write the story of her seething youth—

How lizards paddled in her lukewarm soul

Must show the cones she ripened and forsooth

Count seasons on her trees

Must know her weight and pry into her age

Count her old beach lines by their tidal ewell

Her sunken mountains name, her craters gauge

Her cold volcanoes tell

And treat her as a ball that one might pass

From this hand to the other—such a ball

As he could measure with a blade of grass
And say it was but small!

Honours! O friend I pray you bear with me

The grass hath time to grow in meadow lands

And leisurely the opal murmuring sea Breaks on her yellow sands,

“And leisurely the ring-dove on her nest Broods till her tender chick will peck the shell,
And leisurely down fall from ferny crest
The dew-drops on the well,

“And leisurely your life and spirit grew,
With yet the time to grow and ripen free No judgment past withdraws that boon from you,
Nor granteth it to me

“Still must I plod, and still in cities moil, From precious leisure, learned leisure far,
Dull my best self with handling common soil,
Yet mine those honours are “Mine they are called, they are a name which means, ‘This man had steady pulses, tranquil nerves,

Here, as in other fields, the most he gleans Who works and never swerves

HONOURS

We measure not his mind we cannot tell

What lieth under over or beside The test we put him to he doth excel
We know where he is tried

But, if he boast some farther excellence—

Mind to create as well as to attain
To sway his peers by golden eloquence,
As wind doth shift a fane

To sing among the poets—we are nought

We cannot drop a line into that sea And read its fathoms off nor gauge a thought
Nor map a smile.

It may be of all voices sublunar
The only one he echoes we did try We may have come upon the only star That twinkles in his sky

And so it was with me."

O false my friend!
False false a random charge, a blame undue

Wrest not fair reasoning to a crooked end

False, false, as you are true!

But I read on "And so it was with
me,

Your golden constellations lying apart
They neither hailed nor greeted heartily, Nor noted on their chart

"And yet to you and not to me belong Those finer instincts that, like second sight

And hearing, catch creation's undersong,
And see by inner light

"You are a well, whereon I, gazing,
see

Reflections of the upper heavens—a well

From whence come deep, deep echoes up
to me—

Some underwave's low swell

"I cannot soar into the heights you show, Nor dive among the deeps that you reveal,

But it is much that high things ARE to know,

That deep things ARE to feel

'Tis yours, not mine to pluck out of your breast
Some human truth whose workings re-condite
Were untitled in words, and manifest And hold it forth to light

And cry Behold this thing that I have found.
And though they knew not of it till that day Nor should have done with no man to expound
Its meaning yet they say

We do accept it lower than the shoals
We skim this diver went nor did create But find it for us deeper in our souls Than we can penetrate

You were to me the world's interpreter
The man that taught me Nature's unknown tongue
And to the notes of her wild dulcimer
First set sweet words and sung

And what am I to you? A steady hand To hold a steadfast heart to trust withal

HONOURS

Merely a man that loves you, and will stand

By you, whate'er befall

“But need we praise his tendance tutelar Who feeds a flame that warms him?”

Yet 'tis true

I love you for the sake of what you are,
And not of what you do —

“As heaven's high twins, whereof in Tyrian blue

The one revolveth through his course immense

Might love his fellow of the damask hue,
For like, and difference

“For different pathways evermore decreed To intersect, but not to interfere,

For common goal, two aspects, and one speed,

One centre and one year,

“For deep affinities, for drawings strong,
That by their nature each must needs exert,

For loved alliance, and for union long,
That stands before desert

And yet desert makes brighter not the less

For nearest his own star he shall not

To think those rays unmatched for nobles-ness

That distance counts but pale.

Be pale afar since still to me you shine And must while Nature's eldest law shall hold —

Ah there's the thought which makes his random line

Dear as refined gold!

Then shall I drink this draught of oxymel

•Part sweet part sharp? Myself o'er-prized to know

Is sharp the cause is sweet and truth to tell

Few would that cause forgo

Which is, that thl of all the men on earth Doth love me well enough to count me great—

To think my soul and his of equal girth—O liberal estimate!

And yet it is so he is bound to me

For human love makes aliens near of kin

As such an one being brought to sudden
Doubts all his foregone path if t were the true
And turns to this and then to the other hand
As knowing not what to do —

So I being checked am with my path at strife
Which led to such a chasm and there doth end.
False path! it cost me priceles years of life
My well-beloved friend.

There fell a flute when Ganymede went up—The flute that he was wont to play upon It dropped beside the jonquils milk white cup,
And freckled cowslips wan—

Dropped from his heedless hand when dazed and mute
He sailed upon the eagles quivering wing Spring, panting—ay it dropped—the flute Erewhile a cherished thing

HONOURS

Among the delicate grasses and the bells

Of crocuses that spotted a rill side, I picked up such a flute, and its clear swells

To my young lips replied

I played thereon, and its response was sweet,

But lo, they took from me that solacing reed

“O shame!” they said, “such music is not meet,

Go up like Ganymede

“Go up, despise these humble grassy things,

Sit on the golden edge of yonder cloud ”

Alas! though ne’er for me those eagle wings

Stooped from their eyrie proud

My flute! and flung away its echoes sleep,

But as for me, my life-pulse beateth
low,

And like a last-year’s leaf, enshrouded
deep

Under the drifting snow,

Or like some vessel wrecked upon the sand
Of torrid swamps with all her merchandise
And left to rot betwixt the sea and land
 My helpless spirit lies.

Rueing I think for what then was I made What end appointed for — what use designed?
Now let me right this heart that was betrayed —
 Unveil these eyes gone blind.

My well-beloved friend at noon to-day Over our cliffs a white mist lay unfurled
So thick one standing on their brink might say Lo, here doth end the world.

A white abyss beneath and nought beside Yet hark! a cropping sound not ten feet down: Soon I could trace some browsing lambs that hid Through rock-paths cleft and brown.

And here and there green tufts of grass peered through,
 Salt lavender, and sea thrift, then behold,
The mist, subsiding ever, bared to view
 A beast of giant mould

She seemed a great sea monster lying content
 With all her cubs about her but deep—deep—
The subtle mist went floating, its descent Showed the world's end was steep

It shook, it melted, shaking more, till, lo,
 The sprawling monster was a rock, her brood Were boulders, whereon seamew's white as snow
 Sat watching for their food

Then once again it sank, its day was done
 Part rolled away, part vanished utterly,
And glimmering softly under the white sun, Behold ' a great white sea

O that the mist which veileth my To-come Would so dissolve and yield unto mine eyes

HONOURS

A worthy path! I'd count not wearisome Long toil, nor enterprise,

But strain to reach it ay with wrestlings stout And hopes that even in the dark will grow 'Like plants in dungeons reaching feelers out)
And ploddings wary and slow

Is there such path already made to fit
The measure of my foot? It shall atone For much, if I at length may light on it And know it for mine own

But is there none? why then tis more than well
And glad at heart myself will hew one out,
Let me be only sure for sooth to tell The sorest dole is doubt—

Doubt, a blank twilight of the heart, which mares
All sweetest colours in its dimness same A soul-mist, through whose rifts familiar stars
Beholding we misname.

A ripple on the inner sea, which shakes
Those images that on its breast reposed, A fold upon a wind-swayed flag that breaks

The motto it disclosed

O doubt! O doubt! I know my destiny, I feel thee fluttering bird-like in my breast,
I cannot loose, but I will sing to thee,
And flatter thee to rest

There is no certainty, "my bosom's guest", No proving for the things whereof ye wot,
For, like the dead to sight unmanifest,
They are, and they are not

But surely as they are, for God is truth, And as they are not, for we saw them die,
So surely from the heaven drops light for
youth,
If you will walk thereby

And can I see this light? It may be so,
"But see it thus and thus," my fathers said

The living do not rule this world, ah no!
It is the dead, the dead

HONOURS

Shall I be slave to every noble soul Study the dead and to their spirits bend Or learn to read my own heart's folded scroll,
And make self rule my end?

Thought from without—O shall I take on trust
And life from others modelled steal or win Or shall I heave to light and clear of rust
My true life from within?

O let me be myself! But where O where Under this heap of precedent this mound Of customs, modes, and maxims cumbrance rare Shall the Myself be found?

O thou Myself thy fathers thee debarred None of their wisdom but their folly
Therewith they smoothed thy path but made it hard For thee to quit the same.

With glosses they obscured God's natural truth,
And with tradition tarnished His revealed,
With vain protections they endangered
youth,
With layings bare they sealed

What aileth thee, myself? Alas! thy hands Are tired with old opinions — heir and son,
Thou hast inherited thy father's lands
And all his debts thereon

O that some power would give me Adam's^c
eyes!
Or for the straight simplicity of Eve!
For I see nought, or grow, poor fool, too wise
With seeing to believe

Exemplars may be heaped until they hide
The rules that they were made to render plain,
Love may be watched, her nature to decide,
Until love's self doth wane

HONOURS

Ah me! and when forgotten and foregone We leave the learning of departed days
And cease the generations past to con
Their wisdom and their ways—

When fain to learn we lean into the dark,
And grope to feel the floor of the abyss Or find the secret boundary lines which mark Where soul and matter kiss—

Fair world! these puzzled souls of ours grow weak
With beating their bruised wings against the rim
That bounds their utmost flying when they seek
The distant and the dim.

We pant, we strain like birds against their wires;
Are sick to reach the vast and the beyond —
And what avails if still to our desires Those far-off gulfs respond?

HONOURS

Contentment comes not therefore, still there lies

An outer distance when the first is hailed,
And still for ever yawns before our eyes
An UTMOST—that is veiled

Searching those edges of the universe, We leave the central fields a fallow part,
To feed the eye more precious things amerce,
And starve the darkened heart

Then all goes wrong the old foundations rock,
One scorns at him of old who gazed unshod,
One striking with a pickaxe thinks the shock
Shall move the seat of God

A little way, a very little way (Life is so short), they dig into the rind,
And they are very sorry, so they say,— Sorry for what they find

But truth is sacred—ay, and must be told
There is a story long beloved of man,

HONOURS

We must forgo it for it will not hold—Nature had no such plan.

And then if God had said it "some should cry
We have the story from the fountainhead "

Why then what better than the old reply
The first Yea HATH God said?"

The garden O the garden, must it be Source of our hope and our most dear regret?

The ancient story must it no more shun How man may win it yea?

And all upon the Titan child's decree
The baby science born but yesterday That in its rash unlearned infancy With hell and stone at play

And delving in the outwork of the world,
And little crevices that it could reach Discovered certain bones laid up and fured
Under an ancient beach

HONOURS

And other waifs that lay to its young mind

Some fathoms lower than they ought to lie,

By gain whereof it could not fail to find Much proof of ancientry,

Hints at a pedigree withdrawn and vast,
Terrible deeps, and old obscurities,
Or soulless origin, and twilight passed In the primeval seas,

Whereof it tells, as thinking it hath been Of truth not meant for man inheritor, As if this knowledge Heaven had ne'er foreseen

And not provided for!

Knowledge ordained to live! although the fate

Of much that went before it was—to die,

And be called ignorance by such as wait Till the next drift comes by O marvellous credulity of man!

If God indeed kept secret, couldst thou know

Or follow up the mighty Artisan Unless He willed it so?

HONOURS

And canst thou of the Maker think us
sooth

That of the Made He shall be found at fault,

And dream of wresting from him hidden truth

By force or by assault?

But if He keeps not secret—if thine eyes He openeth to His wondrous work of Life—

Think how in soberme & thy wisdom lies
And have the grace to wait

Wait not against the half-learned lesson fret

* Nor chide at old belief as if it erred, Because thou canst not reconcile as yet
The Worker and the word.

Either the Worker did in ancient days Give us the word His tale of love and might;

(And if in truth He gave it us who says He did not give it right)

Or else He gave it not and then indeed We know not if He is—by whom our years

HONOURS

Are portioned, who the orphan moons doth lead,
And the unfathered spheres

We sit unowned upon our burial sod, And know not whence we come or whose we be,
Comfortless mourners for the mount of God,
The rocks of Calvary

Bereft of heaven, and of the long-loved page Wrought us by some who thought with death to cope, Despairing comforters, from age to age Sowing the seeds of hope

Gracious deceivers, who have lifted us Out of the slough where passed our unknown youth, Beneficent liars, who have gifted us
With sacred love of truth !

Farewell to them yet pause ere thou unmoor
And set thine ark adrift on unknown seas,

How wert thou bettered so or never secure

Thou and thy destinies?

And if thou searchest and art made to fear

Facing of unread riddles dark and hard,

And mastering not their majesty austere
Their meaning locked and barred:

How would it make the weight and wonder less

If, lifted from immortal shoulders down

The worlds were cast on seas of emptiness

In realms without a crown

And (if there were no God) were I it to rue

Dominion of the air and of the fire?

Then if there be a God Let God be true

And every man a liar "

But as for me I do not peak a one

That is exempt I am with life at feud;

HONOURS

My heart reproacheth me, as there were none

Of so small gratitude

Wherewith shall I console thee, heart o'
mine,

And still thy yearning and resolve thy doubt?

That which I know, and that which I divine,

Alas ! have left thee out

I have aspired to know the might of God,
As if the story of his love was furled, Nor sacred foot the grasses e'er had trod
Of this redeemed world —

Have sunk my thoughts as lead into the deep,

To grope for that abyss whence evil grew,

And spirits of ill, with eyes that cannot weep,

Hungry and desolate flew,

As if their legions did not one day crowd
The death-pangs of the Conquering Good to see !

As if a sacred head had never bowed In death for man—for me,

Nor ransomed back the soul beloved
the sons
Of men from thralldom with the netter kings
In that dark country where those evil ones
Trail their unhallowed wings

And didst Thou love the race that loved not Thee
And didst Thou take to heart a human brow?
Dost plead with man's voice by the marvellous sea?
Art Thou his kinsman now?

O God O kinsman loved but not enough!
O man with eyes may see all our death Whose feet have toiled along our path ways rough Whose lips drawn human breath!

By that one likeness which is ours and Thine
By that one nature which doth hold us kin,
By that high heaven where unless Thou dost shine
To draw us sinners in

HONOURS

By Thy last silence in the judgment-hall, By long foreknowledge of the deadly tree,
By darkness, by the wormwood and the gall,
I pray Thee visit me

Come, lest this heart should, cold and cast away,
Die ere the guest adored she entertain—
Lest eyes which never saw Thine earthly
Should miss Thy heavenly reign

Come weary-eyed from seeking in the night Thy wanderers strayed upon the path-less wold,
Who wounded, dying, cry to Thee for light,
And cannot find then fold

And deign, O Watcher, with the sleepless brow,
Pathetic in its yearning—deign reply Is there, O is there aught that such as Thou
Wouldst take from such as I ?

HONOURS

Are there no brambles across Thy pathway thrust?

Are there no thorns that compass it about?

Nor any stones that Thou wilt crouch to trust

My hands to gather out?

O if Thou wilt and if well it might be

It were a cure for doubt's regret delay—

Let my lost pathway go—what ails
me?—

There is a better way

What though unmarked the happy work man toil

And break unthanked of man the tub-born clod?

It is enough for sacred is the soil

Dear are the hills of God.

Far better in its place the lowliest bird

Should sing aright to Him the lowliest

Than that a seraph strayed should take the word

And sing His glory wrong

HONOURS

Friend, it is time to work I say to thee, Thou dost all earthly good by much excel,
Thou and God's blessing are enough for
me
My work, my work—farewell !

Requiescat
in Pace!

O my heart my heart is sick and lunk and awaiting The lad took up his knapsack he went he went his way;
And I looked on for his coming as a prisoner through the grate Larks and larks and larks and wishes for its opening day

On the wild purple mountains, all alone with no other
The strong terrible mountains he longed he longed to be
And he stooped to kiss his father and he stooped to kiss his mother And till I said "Adieu sweet Sir" he quite forgot me

He wore of their white raiment the ghostly capes that screen them Of the storm winds that beat them, their cloaklets and scars

REQUIESCAT IN PACE'

And the paradise of purple, and the golden slopes atween them,
And fields, where grow God's gentian bells, and His crocus stars

He wrote of frail gauzy clouds, that drop on them like fleeces,
And make green their fir forests, and feed their mosses hoar, Or come sailing up the valleys, and get wrecked and go to pieces, Like sloops against their cruel strength then he wrote no more

O the silence that came next, the patience and long aching'

They never said so much as "He was a dear loved son,"

Not the father to the mother moaned, that dreary stillness breaking
"Ah! wherefore did he leave us—this, our only one?"

They 'sat within, as waiting, until the neighbours prayed them,
At Cromer, by the sea-coast, 't were peace and change to be,
And to Cromer, in their patience, or that urgency affrayed them, Or because the tidings tarried, they came, and took me

REQUIESCAT IN PACE!

It was three months and over since the dear lad had started

Oo the green downs at Cromer I sat to see the view

On an open space of herbage, where the ling and fern had parted,

Betwixt the tall white lighthouse towers, the old and the new

Below me lay the wide sea, the scarlet suo was stooping

And he dyed the waste water as with a scarlet dye

And he dyed the lighthouse towers every bird with white wing swooping

Took his colours and the cliffs did and the yawning sky

Over grass came that strange flush and over hog and heather

Over flocks of sheep and lambs and over Cromer town

And each filmy cloudlet crossing drifted like a scarlet feather

Torn from the folded wings of clouds, while he settled down.

When I looked, I dared not sigh —In the light of God's splendour

With his daily blue and gold who am I? what am I?

REQUIESCAT IN PACE'

But that passion and outpouring seemed an awful sign and tender, Like the blood of the Redeemer, shown on earth and sky

O for comfort, O the waste of a long doubt and trouble¹

On that sultry August eve trouble had me meek,

I was tired of my sorrow—O so faint, for it was double

In the weight of its oppression, that I could not speak!

And a little comfort grew, while the dimmed eyes were feeding,

And the dull ears with murmur of waters satisfied,

But a dream came slowly nigh me, all my thoughts and fancy leading

Across the bounds of waking life to the other side

And I dreamt that I looked out, to the waste waters turning,

And saw the flakes of scarlet from wave to wave tossed on,

And the scarlet mix with azure, where a heap of gold lay burning

On the clear remote sea reaches, for the sun was gone

REQUIESCAT IN PACE!

Then I thought a far-off shout dropped across the still water—

A question as I took it for soon an answer came

From the tall white ruined lighthouse If it be the old man's daughter

That we wot of "can the answer what then—who's to blame?"

I looked up at the lighthouse all roofless and storm-broken

A great white bird sat on it with neck stretched out to sea

Unto somewhat which was sailing in a skiff the bird had spoken

And a trembling seized my spirit, for they talked of me.

I was the old man's daughter the bird went on to name him

He loved to count the starlings as he sat in the sun

Long ago he served with Nelson and his story did not shame him

Ay the old man was a good man—and his work was done."

The skiff was like a crescent ghost of some moon departed

Frail white, she rocked and curtsied as the red wave she crossed,

REQUIESCAT IN PACE'

And the thing within sat paddling, and the crescent dipped and darted, Flying on, again was shouting, but the words were lost

I said, "That thing is hooded, I could hear but that floweth
The great hood below its mouth " then the bird made reply,
"If they know not, more's the pity, for the little shrewmouse knoweth, And the kite knows, and the eagle, and the glead and pye "

And he stooped to whet his beak on the stones of the coping, And when once more the shout came,
in querulous tones he spake,
"What I said was 'more's the pity', if the heart be long past hoping, Let it say of death, 'I know it,' or doubt on and break

"Men must die—one dies by day, and near him moans his mother, They dig his grave, tread it down, and go from it full loth And one dies about the midnight, and the wind moans, and no other,
And the snows give him a burial—and God loves them both

REQUIESCAT IN PACE!

The first hath no advantage—it shall not soothe his slumber
That a lock of his brown hair his father aye shall keep
For the last he nothing grudgeth it shall nought his quiet cumber
That in a golden mesh of his callow eaglets sleep

Men must die when all is said, even the late and glead know it,
And the lad's father knew it and the lad, the lad too
It was never kept a secret waters bring it and winds blow it,
And he met it on the mountain—why then make ado?

With that he spread his white wings, and swept across the water Lit upon the hooded head and it and all went down
And they laughed as they went under and I woke, the old man's daughter"
And looked across the slope of grass and at Cromer town.

And I said Is that the sky all grey and silver suited?"
And I thought Is that the sea that lies so white and wan?

REQUIESCAT IN PACE'

I have dreamed as I remember givé me time—I was reputed Once to have a steady courage—O, I fear 'tis gone!"

And I said, "Is this my heart? if it be, low 'tis beating, "
So he lies on the mountain, hard by the eagles' brood,
I have had a dream this evening, while the white and gold were fleeting, But I need not, need not tell it—where would be the good?"

"Where would be the good to them, his father and his mother?
For the ghost of their dead hope ap-peareth to them still While a lonely watchfire smoulders, who its dying red would smother, That gives what little light there is to a darksome hill?"

I rose up, I made no moan, I did not cry nor falter,
But slowly in the twilight I came to Cromer town
What can wringing of the hands do that which is ordained to alter?
He had climbed, had climbed the mountain, he would ne'er come down

REQUIESCAT IN PACE!

But O my first, O my best I could not choose but love thee

O to be a wild white bird, and seek thy rocky bed!

From my breast I'd give thee burial pluck the down and spread above thee

I would alt and sing thy requiem on the mountain head.

Fare thee well, my love of loves! would I had died before thee!

O to be at least a cloud that near thee I might flow

Solemnly approach the mountain weep away my being o'er thee,

And veil thy breast with icicles, and thy brow with snow!

Supper at the Mill

Mother Well, Frances

Frances Well, good mother, how are you?

M I'm hearty, lass, but warm, the weather's warm

I think 't is mostly warm on market days I met with George behind the mill said he,
"Mother, go in and rest awhile "

F Ay, do,
And stay to supper, put your basket down

M Why, now, it is not heavy?

F Willie, man,
Get up and kiss your Granny Heavy, no!
Some call good churning luck, but, luck or skill,

Your butter mostly comes as firm and sweet

As if 't was Christmas So you sold it all?

M All but this pat that I put by for,
George,

He always loved my butter

F That he did

SUPPER AT THE MILL

M And has your speckled hen brought off her brood?

F Not yet but that old duck I told you of

She hatched eleven out of twelve to-day

Child. And Granny they're so yellow

M Ay my lad

Yellow as gold—yellow as Willie's hair

C. They're all mine Granny—father says they're mine.

M To think of that!

F Yes, Granny only think!

Why father means to sell them when they're fat

And put the money in the savings bank

And all against our Willie goes to school

But Willie would not touch them—no not he

He knows that father would be angry else.

C But I want one to play with—O

I want

A little yellow duck to take to bed!

M What! would ye rob the poor old mother then?

F Now Granny if you'll hold the babe awhile

*Tis time I took up Willie to his crib.

[Exit FRANCES.]

[Mother sings to the infant]

Playing on the virginals, Who but I? Sae glad, sae free, Smelling for all cordials,
The green mint and marjorie,
Set among the budding broom Kingcup and daffodilly,
By my side I made him room
O love my Willie!

"Like me, love me, girl o' gowd," Sang he to my nimble strain,
+ Sweet his ruddy lips o'erflowed Till my heartstrings rang again
By the broom, the bonny broom,
Kingcup and daffodilly,
In my heart I made him room
O love my Willie!

"Pipe and play, dear heart," sang he,
"I must go, yet pipe and play,
Soon I'll come and ask of thee
For an answer yea or nay,"
And I waited till the flocks Panted in yon waters stilly,
And the corn stood in the shocks
O love my Willie!

I thought first when thou didst come
I would wear the ring for thee,

SUPPER AT THE MILL

But the year told out its sum Ere again thou satst by me;
Thou hadst nought to ask that day
By kingcup and daffodilly;
I said neither yea nor nay;
O love my Willie!

Enter GEORGE

G Well mother 'tis a fortnight now or more

Since I set eyes on you.

M Ay George my dear
I reckon you've been busy so have we

G And how does father?

M He gets through his work,
But he grows stiff a little stiff my dear He's not so young you know by twenty

As I am—not so young by twenty years
And I'm past sixty

G Yet he's hale and stout And seems to take a pleasure in his pipe
And seems to take a pleasure in his cows
And a pride too.

M And well he may my dear

G Give me the little one he tucks your arm

He's such a kinking crowing wakeful rogue

SUPPER AT THE MILL

He almost wears our lives out with his noise

Just at day-dawning, when we wish to sleep

What! you young villain, would you clench your fist

In father's curls? a dusty father, sure,
And you're as clean as wax

Ay, you may laugh,
But if you live a seven years more or so, These hands of yours will all be brown and scratched

With climbing after nest-eggs They'll go down

As many rat-holes as are round the mere,
And you'll love mud, all manner of mud and dirt,

As your father did afore you, and you'll wade

After young water-birds, and you'll get bogged

Setting of eel-traps, and you'll spoil your clothes,

And come home torn and dripping then,
you know,

You'll feel the stick—you'll feel the stick, my lad!

SUPPER AT THE MILL

With my half-dozen! Children, ay, forsooth,

They bring their own love with them when they come,

But if they come not there is peace and rest,

The pretty lambs! and yet she cries for more

Why, the world's full of them, and so is heaven—

They are not rare

G No, mother, not at all,
But Hannah must not keep our Fanny
long—

She spoils her

M Ah! folks spoil their children now,
When I was a young woman 't was not so,
We made our children fear us, made them work,

Kept them in order

G Were not proud of them—
Eh, mother?

M I set store by mine, 't is true,
But then I had good cause

G My lad, d'ye hear?
Your Granny was not proud, by no means proud!

She never spoilt your father—no, not she,
Nor ever made him sing at harvest-home,
Nor at the forge, nor at the baker's shop,

SUPPER AT THE MILL

And I live higher, in the shade
Of my old walnut-trees

So many lads and lasses small,
To feed them all, to clothe them all,
Must surely tax his wit,
I see his thatch when I look out,
His branching roses creep about,
And vines half smother it

There white-haired urchins climb his eaves,
And little watch-fires heap with leaves,
And milky filberts hoard,
And there his oldest daughter stands With downcast eyes and skilful hands Before her ironing board

o

She comforts all her mother's days,
And with her sweet obedient ways
She makes her labour light,
So sweet to hear, so fair to see'
O, she is much too good for me,
That lovely Lettice White'

'Tis hard to feel oneself a fool'
With that same lass I went to school—
I then was great and wise,
She read upon an easier book, &
And I—I never cared to look Into her shy blue eyes

SUPPER AT THE MILL

And now I know they must be there Sweet eyes, behind those lashes fair That will not raise their rim;
If maids be shy he cures who can;
But if a man be shy—a man—
Why then the worse for him!

My mother cries, For such a lad A wife is easy to be had And always to be found;
A finer scholar scarce can be,
And for a foot and leg says she,
He beats the country round!

My handsome boy must stoop his head
To clear her door whom he would wed.
Weak praise, but fondly sung!
O mother! scholars sometimes fall—
And what can foot and leg avail
To him that wants a tongue?

When by her ironing board I sit Her little sisters round me sit,
And bring me forth their store;
Dark cluster grapes of dusty blue,
And small sweet apples bright of hue
And crimson to the core.

But she abideth silent, fair
All abaded by her flaxen hair
The blushes come and go;
I look, and I no more can peak

SUPPER AT THE MILL

Than the red sun that on her cheek Smiles as he lieth low

Sometimes the roses by the latch
Or scarlet vine-leaves from her thatch Come sailing down like birds,
When from their drifts her board I clear,
She thanks me, but I scarce can hear
The shyly uttered words

Oft have I wooed sweet Lettice White By daylight and by candlelight
When we two were apart
Some better day come on apace,
And let me tell her face to face,
"Maiden thou hast my heart "

How gently rock yon poplars high Against the reach of primrose sky With heaven's pale candles stored!
He sees them all, sweet Lettice White,
"e'en go sit again to-night
Beside her ironing board!

Why, you young rascal! who would think it now?

No sooner do I stop than you look up What would you have your poor old father do?

'Twas a brave song, long-winded, and not loud

M He heard the bacon sputter on the fork,
And heard his mother's step across the floor

Where did you get that song?—tis now
to me.

G I bought it of a pedlar

M Did you so?
Well you were always for the love-songs
George.

F My dear just lay his head upon your arm
And if you'll pace and slog two minutes

He needs must sleep—his eyes are full of sleep.

G Do you sing mother

F Ay good mother do
'Tis long since we have heard you.

M Like enough I'm an old woman, and the girls and lads

I used to sing to sleep o'er top me now What should I sing for?

G Why to pleasure us.
Sing in the chimney corner where you sit

And I'll pace gently with the little one.

[Mother sings]

When sparrows build, and the leaves break forth,

My old sorrow wakes and cries,
For I know there is dawn in the far, far north,

And a scarlet sun doth rise,
Like a scarlet fleece the snow-field spreads,
And the icy founts run free,
And the bergs begin to bow their heads,
And plunge, and sail in the sea

O my lost love, and my own, own love,
And my love that loved me so!
Is there never a clink in the world above Where they listen for words from below? c Nay, I spoke once, and I grieved thee sore, I remember all that I said,
And now thou wilt hear me no more—no more Till the sea gives up her dead

Thou didst set thy foot on the ship, and sail To the ice-fields and the snow, Thou wert sad, for thy love did nought avail,
And the end I could not know, How could I tell I should love thee to-day, Whom that day I held not dear?
How could I know I should love thee away
When I did not love thee anear?

We shall walk no more through the wooden plain

With the faded bent o'erspread

We shall stand no more by the weithing in

While the dark wrack drives overhead;

We shall part no more to the wind and the rain,

Where thy last farewell words

But perhaps I shall meet thee and know thee again

When the sea gives up her dead.

Asleep at last and true he was indeed.

Turn back the cradle-quilt and lay him in

And mother will you please to draw your chair—

The supper is ready

Scholar and Carpenter

While ripening corn grew thick and deep,
And here and there men stood to reap,
One morn I put my heart to sleep,
And to the lanes I took my way
The goldfinch on a thistle-head Stood scattering seedlets while she fed,
The wrens their pretty gossip spread,
Or joined a random roundelay

On hanging cobwebs shone the dew,
And thick the wayside clovers grew,
The feeding bee had much to do,
So fast did honey-drops exude
She sucked and murmured, and was gone,
And lit on other blooms anon,
The while I learned a lesson on The source and sense of quietude

For sheep-bells chiming from a fold,
Or bleat of lamb within its fold,
Or cooing of love-legends old
To dove-wives make not quiet less,

Ecstatic chirp of wing'd thing Or bubbling of the water spring Are sounds that more than silence bring, Itself and its delightfulness.

While thus I went to gladness vain
I had but walked a mile or twain Before my heart woke up again,
As dreaming she had slept too late;
The morning freshness that she viewed With her own meanings she endued
And touched with her solicitude
The nature she did meditate.

If quiet is for it I wait;
To it ah! let me wed my fate
And like a sad wife supplicate
My roving lord no more to fire
If leisure is—but ah! it is not—
'Tis long past praying for God wot
The fashion of it men forgot About the age of chivalry

Sweet is the leisure of the bird;
She craves no time for work deferred;
Her wings are not to aching stirred Providing for her helpless ones.
Fair is the leisure of the wheat
All night the damps about it fleet

All day it basketh in the heat,
And grows, and whispers oisons

“Grand is the leisure of the earth,
She gives her happy myriads birth,
And after harvest fears not dearth,
But goes to sleep in snow-wreaths dim Dread is the leisure up above
The while He sits whose name is Love,
And waits, as Noah did, for the dove,
To wit if she would fly to him

“He waits for us, while, houseless things, We beat about with bruised wings
On the dark floods and water-springs,
The ruined world, the desolate sea,
With open windows from the prime
All night, all day, He waits sublime, Until the fullness of the time Decreed from His eternity

“Where is OUR leisure?—Give us rest Where is the quiet we possessed?
We must have had it once—were blest With peace whose phantoms yet entice Sorely the mother of mankind Longed for the garden left behind, For we still prove some yearnings blind Inherited from Paradise ”

"Hold heart!" I cried for trouble sleeps

I hear no sound of aught that weeps
I will not look into thy deeps—

I am afraid I am afraid!"

"Afraid!" she saith; and yet 'tis true That what man dreads he still should view—

Should do the thing he fears to do And storm the ghosts in ambushad "

"What good?" I sigh. "Way & avon meant

To straighten branches that are bent Or soothe an ancient discontent

The instinct of a race dethroned?
Wh! doubly should that instinct go Must the four rivers cease to flow Nor yield those rumours sweet and low Wherewith man's life is undertoned."

"Yet had I but the past," she cries And it was lost I would arise

And comfort me some other wise
But more than loss about me clings I am but restless with my race
The whi peys from a heavenly place Once dropped among us seem to clime Rest with their prophet slatings.

“The race is like a child, as yet Too young for all things to be set Plainly before him with no let Or hindrance meet for his degree,
But nevertheless by much too old
Not to perceive that men withhold More of the story than is told,
And so infer a mystery

“If the Celestials daily fly With messages on missions high,
And float, our masts and turrets nigh, Conversing on Heaven’s great intents,
What wonder hints of coming things, Whereto man’s hope and yearning clings, Should drop like feathers from their wings
And give us vague presentiments?”

“And as the waxing moon can take The tidal waters in her wake
And lead them round and round to break Obedient to her drawings dim,
So may the movements of His mind,
The first Great Father of mankind, Affect with answering movements blind,
And draw the souls that breathe by Him

“We had a message long ago That like a river peace should flow,

And Eden bloom again below

We heard and we began to wait Full soon that message men forgot Yet waiting is their destined lot And waiting for they know not what They strive with yearnings passionate

Regret and faith alike enchain
There was a loss there comes a gain
We stand at fault betwixt the twain
And that is veiled for which we pant.
Our lives are short our ten times seven
We think the councils held in heaven Sit long ere yet that blissful leaven Work peace amongst the militant

• Then we blame God that sin should be Adam began it at the tree

The woman whom Thou gavest me
And we adopt his dark device.
O long Thou tarriest! come and reign
And bring forgiveness in Thy train And give us in our hands again
The apples of Thy Paradise."

Far-seeing heart! if that be all,
The happy things that did not fall "
I sighed from every coppice call.
They never from that garden went

Behold their joy, so comfort thee,
Behold the blossom and the bee,
For they are yet as good and free
As when poor Eve was innocent

“But reason thus ‘If we sank low,
If the lost garden we forgo,
Each in his day, nor ever know
But in our poet souls its face, Yet we may rise until we reach A height untold of in its speech—
A lesson that it could not teach Learn in this darker dwelling-place’

“And reason on ‘We take the spoil, Loss made us poets, and the soil Taught us great patience in our toil,
And life is kin to God through death Christ were not One with us but so,
And if bereft of Him we go,
Dearer the heavenly mansions grow,
His home, to man that wandereth’

“Content thee so, and ease thy smart”
With that she slept again, my heart,
And I admired and took my part With crowds of happy things the while With open velvet butterflies That swung and spread their peacock eyes

As if they cared no more to rise
From off their beds of camomile.

The blackcaps in an orchard met Praising the berries while they ate
The finch that flew her beak to whet Before she joined them on the tree
The water mouse among the reeds—
His bright eyes glancing black as beads, So happy with a bunch of seeds—
I felt their gladness heartily

But I came on I smelt the hay
And up the hills I took my way
And down them still made holiday And walked and wearied not a whit But ever with the lane I went Until it dropped with steep descent, Cut deep into the rock, a tent
Of maple branches roofing it.

Adown the rock small runlets wept
And reckless ivies leaned and crept
And little spots of sunshine slept On its brown steeps and made them fair
And broader beams athwart it shot, Where martins cheeped in many a knot For they had taken a sandy plot And scooped another Petra there.

And deeper down, hemmed in and hid From upper light and life amid The swallows gossiping, I thrid Its mazes, till the dipping land Sank to the level of my lane
That was the last hull of the chain,
And fair below I saw the plain That seemed cold cheer to reprimand

Half-drowned in sleepy peace it lay,
As satiate with the boundless play
Of sunshine on its green array
And clear-cut hills of gloomy blue
To keep it safe rose up behind,
As with a charmed ring to bind
The grassy sea, where clouds might find A place to bring their shadows to

I said, and blest that pastoral grace,
"How sweet thou art, thou sunny place!
Thy God approves thy smiling face"

But straight my heart put in her word,
She said, "Albeit thy face I bless,
There have been times, sweet wilderness,
When I have wished to love thee less,
Such pangs thy smile administered"

But, lo! I reached a field of wheat,
And by its gate full clear and sweet

Then to a runlet forth he went,
And brought a wallet from the bent,
And bade me to the meal, intent
I should not quit his neighbourhood

“For here,” said he, “are bread and beer,
And meat enough to make good cheer,
Sir, eat with me, and have no fear,
For none upon my work depend,
Saving this child, and I may say That I am rich, for every day
I put by somewhat, therefore stay,
And to such eating condescend”

We ate The child—child fair to see—
Began to cling about his knee,
And he down leaning fatherly Received some softly-prattled prayer,
He smiled as if to list were balm,
And with his labour-hardened palm Pushed from the baby-forehead calm Those shining locks that clustered there

The rosy mouth made fresh essay—“O would he sing, or would he play?” I looked, my thought would make its way—

“Fair is your child of face and limb, The round blue eyes full sweetly shine”
He answered me with glance benign—

Ay Sir but he is none of mine
Although I set great store by him.

With that as if his heart was fain
To open—nathless not complain—
He let my quiet questions gain His story Not of kin to me " Repeating but asleep awake For worse, for better him I take To cherish for my dead wife's sake
And count him as her legacy

I married with the sweetest lass That ever stepped on meadow grass That ever at her looking-glass
Some pleasure took some natural care That ever swept a cottage floor
And worked all day nor e'er gave o'er Till eve, then watched beside the door Till her good man should meet her there

But I lost all in its fresh prime My wife fell ill before her time—
Just as the bells began to chime
One Sunday morn. By next day's light Her little babe was born and dead,
And she, unconscious what she said With feeble hands about her spread Sought it with yearnings infinite

“With mother-longing still beguiled,
And lost in fever-fancies wild,
She piteously bemoaned her child

That we had stolen, she said, away
And ten sad days she sighed to me, ‘I cannot rest until I see My pretty one’ I think that he Smiled in my face but yesterday’

“Then she would change, and faintly try To sing some tender lullaby,
And ‘Ah!’ would moan, ‘if I should die,
Who, sweetest babe, would cherish thee?’

Then weep, ‘My pretty boy is grown,
With tender feet on the cold stone
He stands, for he can stand alone,
And no one leads him motherly’

“Then she with dying movements slow Would seem to knit, or seem to sew ‘His feet are bare, he must not go Unshod’ and as her death drew on, ‘O little baby,’ she would sigh, ‘My little child, I cannot die Till I have you to slumber nigh—
You, you to set mine eyes upon’

“When she spake thus, and moaning lay,
They said, ‘She cannot pass away,

So sore she longs: and as the day Broke on the hills, I left her side Mourning along this lane I went Some travelling folk had pitched their tent Up yonder there a woman bent With age sat meanly canopied.

A twelvemonths child was at her side Whose infant may that be? I cried.
His that will own him she replied His mother's dead no worse could be,
Since you can give—or else I erred—See you are taken at your word Quoth I; that child is mine I heard And own him! Rise and give him me

She rose amazed, but cursed me too
She could not hold such luck for true But gave him soon with small ado.
I laid him by my Lucy's side Close to her face that baby crept
And stroked it and the sweet soul wept
Then while upon her arm he slept
She passed, for she was satisfied.

I loved her well I wept her sore
And when her funeral left my door
I thought that I should never more Feel any pleasure near me glow

But I have learned, though this I had,
'Tis sometimes natural to be glad,
And no man can be always sad Unless he wills to have it so

“Oh, I had heavy nights at first,
And daily wakening was the worst For then my grief arose, and burst Like something fresh upon my head, Yet when less keen it seemed to grow,
I was not pleased—I wished to go Mourning adown this vale of woe,
For all my life uncomforted

“I grudged myself the lightsome air,
That makes man cheerful unaware,
When comfort came, I did not care
To take it in, to feel it stir
And yet God took with me His plan,
And now for my appointed span
I think I am a happier man
For having wed and wept for her “Because no natural tie remains,

On this small thing I spend my gains,
God makes me love him for my pains,
And binds me so to wholesome care
I would not lose from my past life That happy year, that happy wife!

Yet now I wage no useless strife
With feelings blithe and debonair

I have the courage to be gay Although she lieth lapped away
Under the daisies, for I say Thou wouldst be glad if thou couldst
see

My constant thought makes manifest
I have not what I love the best But I must thank God for the rest While I hold heaven a verity "

He rose, upon his shoulder set
The child, and while with vague regret We parted, pleased that we had met " My heart did with herself confer With wholesome shame she did repent Her reasonings idly eloquent
And said " I might be more content:
But God go with the carpenter "

The Star's Monument

IN THE CONCLUDING PART OF A DISCOURSE ON FAME

He thinks

It there be memory in the world to come,
If thought recur to SOME THINGS
silenced here, Then shall the deep heart be no longer dumb,
But find expression in that happier sphere,
It shall not be denied their utmost sum Of love, to speak without or fault or
fear,
But utter to the harp with changes sweet Words that, forbidden still, then heaven were incomplete

He speaks

Now let us talk about the ancient days,
And things which happened long before our birth

THE STAR'S MONUMENT

It is a pity to lament that praise Should be no shadow in the train of worth.
What is it Madam that your heart dismay?
Why murmur at the course of this vast earth?
Think rather of the work than of the praise
Come we will talk about the ancient days.

There was a Poet Madam once (said
he)
I will relate his story to you now While through the branches of this apple
tree
Some spots of sunshine flicker on your brow
While every flower hath on its breast a bee
And every bird in stirring doth endow The grass with falling blooms that smoothly glide,
As ships drop down a river with the tide.

For telling of his tale no fitter place Than this old orchard sloping to the west

Through its pink dome of blossom I can trace

Some overlying azure, for the rest, These flowery branches round us interlace,

The ground is hollowed like a mossy nest
Who talks of fame while the religious spring
Offers the incense of her blossoming?

There was a Poet, Madam, once (said
he),

Who, while he walked at sundown in a lane,
Took to his heart the hope that destiny Had singled him this guerdon to obtain,

That by the power of his sweet minstrelsy

Some hearts for truth and goodness he should gain,
And charm some grovellers to uplift their eyes

And suddenly wax conscious of the skies

“Master, good e’en to ye!” a woodman
said,

Who the low hedge was trimming with his shears

This hour is fine"—the Poet bowed his head.

More fine " he thought, O friend! to me appears

The sunset than to you finer the spread Of orange lustre through these azure spheres,

Where little clouds lie still like flocks of sheep

Or vessels sailing in God's other deep.

O finer far! What work so high as
mine,

Interpreter betwixt the world and man Nature's ungathered pearls to set and shrine,

* The mystery she wraps her in to scan Her unsyllabic voices to combine

And serve her with such love as poets can

With mortal words, her chant of praise to bind,

Then die, and leave the poem to mankind?

O fair O fine, O lot to be desired!

Early and late my heart appeals to me And says O work O will—Thou man be fired,

To earn this lot —she says I would not be

A worker for mine own bread, or one hired

For mine own profit O, I would be free

To work for others, love so earned of them

Should be my wages and my diadem

“ ‘Then when I died I should not fall,’ says she,

‘Like dropping flowers that no man noticeth,

But like a great branch of some stately tree

Rent in a tempest, and flung down to death,

Thick with green leafage—so that piteously

Each passer by that ruin shuddereth, And saith, The gap this branch hath left is wide,

The loss thereof can never be supplied ’”

But, Madam, while the Poet pondered so, Toward the leafy hedge he turned his eye,

And saw two slender branches that did grow,

And from it rising spring and flourish high

Their tops were twined together fast and lo

Their shadow crossed the path as he went by—

The shadow of a wild rose and a briar And it was shaped in semblance like a lyre.

In sooth a lyre! and as the soft air played

Those branches stirred but did not disunite.

O emblem meet for me!" the Poet
said

Ay I accept and own thee for my right

The shadowy lyre across my feet is laid Distinct though frail and clear with crimson light

Fast is it twined to bear the windy strain
And, supple, it will bend and rise again.

This lyre is cast across the dusty way
The common path that common men pursue

I crave like blessing for my shadowy lay Life's trodden paths with beauty to renew

And cheer the eve of many a toil-stained day

Light it, old sun, wet it, thou common dew,
That 'neath men's feet its image still may be While yet it waves above them, living lyre, like thee !"

But even as the Poet spoke, behold
He lifted up his face toward the sky,
The ruddy sun dipt under the grey wold, His shadowy lyre was gone, and, passing by,
The woodman lifting up his shears, was bold
Their temper on those branches twain to try,
And all their loveliness and leafage sweet Fell in the pathway, at the Poet's feet

"Ah ! my fair emblem that I chose," quoth he,

"That for myself I coveted but now, Too soon, methinks, thou hast been false
to me,

The lyre from pathway fades, the light from brow "

Then straightway turned he from it hastily,

As dream that waking sense will disallow,

And while the highway heavenward paled apace
He went on westward to his dwelling place.

He went on steadily while far and fast
 The summer darkness dropped upon the world,
A gentle air among the cloudlets passed And fanned away their crimson then it curled
The yellow poppies in the field and cast
 A dimness on the grasses, for it furled Their daisies and swept out the purple stain
That eve had left upon the pastoral plain

He reached his city Lo! the darkened street Where he abode was full of gazing crowds
He heard the muffled tread of many feet
 A multitude stood gazing at the clouds.
What mark ye there " said he and wherefore meet?
Only a passing mist the heaven o'er shrouds

It breaks, it parts, it drifts like scattered spars—
What lies behind it but the nightly
stars ? ”

Then did the gazing crowd to him aver
 They sought a lump in heaven whose light was hid ,
For that in sooth an old Astronomer Down from his roof had rushed into their mid,
Frighted, and fain with others to confer, That he had cried, “ O sirs ! ”—and upward bid Them gaze—“ O sirs, a light is quenched afar,
Look up, my masters, we have lost a star ! ”

The people pointed, and the Poet's eyes Flew upward, where a gleaming sisterhood Swam in the dewy heaven The very skies
Were mutable, for all-amazed he stood To see that truly not in any wise He could behold them as of old, nor could

His eyes receive the whole whereof he
wot,
But when he told them over one was not

While yet he gazed and pondered reverently
The fickle folk began to move away
It is but one star less for us to see And what does one star signify?" quoth they The heavens are full of them." But ah!" said he,
That star was bright while yet she lasted." Ay!"
They answered praise her Poet an ye will Some are now shining that are brighter still."

Poor star! to be disparaged so soon On her withdrawal" thus the Poet sighed
That men should miss and straight deny her noon Its brightness!" But the people in their pride
Said How are we beholden? 'twas no boon

She gave Her nature 'twas to shine so wide
She could not choose but shine, nor could we know Such star had ever dwelt in heaven but so "

The Poet answered sadly, "That is true!"

And then he thought upon unthankful-
ness, While some went homeward, and the residue, Reflecting that the stars are number-
less,
Mourned that man's daylight hours should be so few,
So short the shining that his path may bless To nearer themes then tuned their willing lips,
And thought no more upon the star's eclipse

But he, the Poet, could not rest content Till he had found that old Astronomer, Therefore at midnight to his house he went
And prayed him be his tale's interpreter

THE STAR S MONUMENT

And yet upon the heaven his eyes he bent

Hearing the marvel yet he sought for her

That was awanting in the hope her face Once more might fill its reft abiding place.

Then said the old Astronomer My son

I sat alone upon my roof to-night

I saw the stars come forth and scarcely shun

To fringe the edges of the western

I marked those ancient clusters one by one,

The same that blessed our old fore fathers sight

For God alone is older—none but He Can charge the stars with mutability

The elders of the night the steadfast
stars

The old, old stars which God has let us see,

That they might be our soul's auxiliars

And help us to the truth how young we be—

God's youngest, latest born, as if, some spars

And a little clay being over of them—

He

Had made our world and us thereof, yet given,

To humble us, the sight of His great heaven

“But ah! my son, to-night mine eyes have seen

The death of light, the end of old renown,

A shrinking back of glory that had been,
A dread eclipse before the Eternal's frown

How soon a little grass will grow between

These eyes and those appointed to look down

Upon a world that was not made on
high

Till the last scenes of their long empire!

“To-night that shining cluster now despoiled

Lay in day's wake a perfect sisterhood,

THE STAR S MONUMENT

Sweet was its light to me that long had toiled

It gleamed and trembled o'er the distant wood

Blown in a pile the clouds from it re-colled,

Cool twilight up the sky her way made good

I saw but not believed—it was so strange—That one of those same stars had suffered change.

The darkness gathered, and methought she spread,

Wrapped in a reddish haze that waxed and waned

•But notwithstanding to myself I said—

The stars are changeless sure some mote hath stained

Mine eyes, and her fair glory minished.

Of age and falling vision I complained And thought some vapour in the heavens doth swim

That makes her look so large and yet so
dim.

But I gazed round, and all her lustrous peers

In her red presence showed but wan and white

Till night was at the darkest and on
high
Her sisters glittered though her light was spent
I strained, to follow her each aching
eye,
So swiftly at her Maker's will she went
I looked again—I looked—the star was gone,
And nothing marked in heaven where she had shone."

Gone!" said the Poet, and about to be

• Forgotten O how sad a fate is hers!"
How is it sad my son? all reverently
The old man answered though she ministers

No longer with her lamp to me and thee

She has fulfilled her mission. God transfers

Or dims her ray yet was she blest as bright

For all her life was spent in giving light.

•
Her mission she fulfilled assuredly."

The Poet cried but O unhappy star!

THE STAR'S MONUMENT

None praise and few will bear in memory

The name she went by O, from far, from far

Comes down, methinks, her mournful voice to me

Full of regrets that men so thankless are "

So said, he told that old Astronomer All that the gazing crowd had said of her

And he went on to speak in bitter wise,
As one who seems to tell another's fate,

But feels that nearer meaning underlies,
And points its sadness to his own estate

"If such be the reward," he said with sighs,

"Envy to earn for love, for goodness hate—

It such be thy reward, hard case is thine!
It had been better for thee not to shine

"If to reflect a light that is divine Makes that which doth reflect it better seen,

And if to see is to condemn the shrine,
'Twere surely better it had never been

THE STAR'S MONUMENT

It had been better for her NOT TO SHINE,
And for me NOT TO SING. Better I ween For us to yield no more that radiance
bright
For them, to lack the light than scorn the light."

Strange words were those from Poet lips (said he)

And then he paused, and sighed, and turned to look

Upon the lady's downcast eyes, and see How fast the honey bees in settling shook

Those apple blossoms on her from the tree

• He watched her busy fingers as they took

And slipped the knotted thread and thought how much

He would have given that hand to hold —to touch.

At length, as suddenly become aware

Of this long pause she lifted up her face,

And he withdrew his eyes—she looked so fair

And cold he thought, in her unconscious grace.

"Ah' little dreams she of the restless care,"

He thought, "that makes my heart to throb apace

Though we this morning part, the knowledge sends

No thrill to her calm pulse—we are but FRIENDS "

Ah' turret clock (he thought), I would thy hand

Were hid behind yon towering maple-trees'

Ah' tell-tale shadow, but one moment
stand—

Dark shadow—fast advancing to my knees,

Ah' foolish heart (he thought), that vainly planned

By feigning gladness to arrive at ease,

Ah' painful hour, yet pain to think it ends,

I must remember that we are but friends

And while the knotted thread moved to and fro,

In sweet regretful tones that lady said

'It seemeth that the fame you would forgo

• The Poet whom you tell of coveted,

But I would fain methinks, his story
know

And was he loved?" said she, or was he wed?

And had he friends?" One friend, per haps," said he,

But for the rest, I pray you let it be."

Ah! little bird (he thought) most patient bird

Breasting thy speckled eggs the long day through

By so much as my reason is preferred

Above thine instinct, I my work would do

Better than thou dost thine. Thou hast
• not stirred

This hour thy wing Ah! russet bird,
I sue

For a like patience to wear through these hours—

Bird on thy nest among the apple flowers.

I will not speak—I will not speak to
thee,

My star! and soon to be my lost, lost
star

The sweetest, first that ever shone on me

So high above me and beyond so far

THE STAR'S MONUMENT

I can forgo thee, but not bear to see My love, like rising mist, thy lustre mar
That were a base return for thy sweet
Shine, though I never more shall see that thou art bright

Never! 'Tis certain that no hope is—none!
No hope for me, and yet for thee no
fear
The hardest part of my hard task is done, Thy calm assures me that I am not
dear,
Though far and fast the rapid moments run,
Thy bosom heaveth not, thine eyes are clear,
Silent, perhaps a little sad at heart
She is I am her friend, and I depart

Silent she had been, but she raised her
face,
“And will you end,” said she, “this half-told tale?”
“Yes, it were best,” he answered her “The place Where I left off was where he felt to fail

His courage Madam through the fancy base

That they who love, endure or work may rail

And cease—if all their love, the works they wrought,

And their endurance, men have set at nought.

It had been better for me NOT to sing My Poet said, and for her NOT to shine

But him the old man answered sorrowing My son, did God who made her the

Lighter of suns, when down to you bright • ring

He cast her like some gleaming alman-dine,

And set her in her place, begirt with rays, Say unto her Give light, or say Earn praise ?

The Poet said, He made her to give
light.

My son the old man answered blest are such

A blessed lot, is theirs but if each night Mankind had praised her radiance—in as much

As praise had never made it wax more
bright,

And cannot now rekindle with its touch Her lost effulgence, it is nought I wot That praise was not her blessing nor her lot'

“ ‘Ay,’ said the Poet, ‘I my words abjure,
And I repent me that I uttered them,
But by her light and by its forfeiture

She shall not pass without her requiem Though my name perish, yet shall hers endure

Though I should be forgotten, she, lost gem,
Shall be remembered, though she sought not fame,
It shall be busy with her beauteous name

“ ‘For I will raise in her bright memory, Lost now on earth, a lasting monument,

And graven on it shall recorded be That all her rays to light mankind were spent,

And I will sing albeit none heedeth me,
On her exemplar being still intent While in men’s sight shall stand the record thus—

‘So long as she did last she lighted us’

THE STAR'S MONUMENT

So said he raised according to his vow On the green grass, where oft his townsfolk met,
Under the shadow of a leafy bough
That leaned toward a singing rivulet, One pure white stone whereon, like crown on brow
The image of the vanished star was set
And this was graven on the pure white stone
In golden letters— WHILE SHE LIVED SHE SHONE

Madam I cannot give this story well—My heart is beating to another chime;
My voice must needs a different cadence
swell
It is you singing bird, which all the time Wooeth his nested mate, that doth dispel My thoughts. What, deem you could a lover's rhyme
The sweetness of that passionate lay excel?"
O soft, O low her voice— I cannot tell."

THE STAR'S MONUMENT

He thinks

The old man—aye he spoke, he was not hard,

“She was his joy,” he said, “his comfort-forter,

But he would trust me I was not debarred

Whate’er my heart approved to say to her”

Approved! O torn and tempted and ill-starred

And breaking heart, approve not nor demur,

It is the serpent that beguileth thee

With “God doth know” beneath this apple tree

Yet, God doth know, and only God doth know

Have pity, God, my spirit groans to Thee!

I bear thy curse primeval, and I go,

But heavier than on Adam falls on
me

My tillage of the wilderness, for lo,

I leave behind the woman, and I see

As ’t were the gates of Eden closing o’er
To hide her from my sight for evermore

4

He speaks

I am a fool with sudden start he cried
To let the song-bird work me such unrest

If I break off again I pray you chide For morning fleeteth with my tale at best

Half told. That white stone Madam gleamed beside

The little rivulet and all men pressed
To read the lost one's story traced thereon The golden legend— While she lived she shone "

And Madam, when the Poet heard them
• read,

And children spell the letters softly through

It may be that he felt at heart some need

Some craving to be thus remembered too;

It may be that he wondered if indeed

He must die wholly when he passed from view

It may be, wished when death his eyes made dim,

That some kind hand would raise such stone for him

THE STAR'S MONUMENT

But shortly, as there comes to most of us,

There came to him the need to quit his home

To tell you why were simply hazardous

What said I, Madam?—men were made to roam

My meaning is It hath been always thus

They are athirst for mountains and sea foam,

Heus of this world, what wonder if perchance

They long to see their grand inheritance?

He left his city, and went forth to teach,

Mankind, his peers, the hidden harmony

That underlies God's discords, and to reach

And touch the master-string that like a sigh

Thrills in their souls, as if it would beseech

Some hand to sound it, and to satisfy

Its yearning for expression but no word

Till poet touch it hath to make its music heard

•

He thinks

I know that God is good, though evil dwells
Among us, and doth all things holiest share
That there is joy in heaven, while yet our knells Sound for the souls which He has summoned there
That painful love unsatisfied hath spells Earned by its smart to soothe its fellow's care
But yet this atom cannot in the whole Forget itself—it aches a separate soul.

He speaks

But, Madam to my Poet I return
With his sweet cadences of woven words,
He made their rude untutored hearts to burn
And melt like gold refined. No brooding birds
Sing better of the love that doth sojourn Hid in the nest of home, which softly glids
The beating heart of life and strait though it be,
Is straitness better than wide liberty

THE STAR'S MONUMENT

He taught them, and they learned, but not the less

Remained unconscious whence that lore they drew,

But dreamed that of their native nobleness Some lofty thoughts that he had planted, grew,

His glorious maxims in a lowly dress Like seed sown broadcast sprung in all men's view,

The sower, passing onward, was not known,

And all men reaped the harvest as their own

It may be, Madam, that those ballads
sweet,

Whose rhythmic measures yesterday we
sung,

Which time and changes make not obsolete,

But (as a river bears down blossoms flung

Upon its breast) take with them while they fleet—

It may be from his lyre that first they sprung,

But who can tell, since work surviveth fame?—

The rhyme is left, but lost the Poet's name

He worked, and bravely he fulfilled his trust—

So long he wandered sowing worthy seed,

Watering of wayside buds that were adust,
And touching for the common ear his reed—

So long to wear away the cankering rust
That dulls the gold of life—so long to plead

With sweetest music for all souls oppressed

That he was old ere he had thought of rest.

Old and grey-headed, leaning on a staff

To that great city of his birth he came,
And at its gates he paused with wondering laugh

To think how changed were all his thoughts of fame

Since first he carved the golden epitaph

To keep in memory a worthy name,
And thought forgetfulness had been its doom

But for a few bright letters on a tomb.

The old Astronomer had long since died

The friends of youth were gone and far dispersed

THE STAR'S MONUMENT

Strange were the domes that rose on every side, Strange fountains on his wondering vision burst,
The men of yesterday their business plied, No face was left that he had known at first,
And in the city gardens, lo, he sees
The saplings that he set are stately trees Upon the grass beneath their welcome shade, Behold! he marks the fair white monument,
And on its face the golden words displayed,
For sixty years their lustre have not spent,
He sitteth by it and is not afraid,
But in its shadow he is well content,
And envies not, though bright their gleamings are,
The golden letters of the vanished star

He gazeth up, exceeding bright appears That golden legend to his aged eyes, For they are dazzled till they fill with
tears,
And his lost Youth doth like a vision rise,

She saith to him, In all these toilsome
years,

What hast thou won by work or enter prise?

What hast thou won to make amends to
thee,

As thou didst swear to do for loss of me?

O man! O white-haired man!" the vision said,

Since we two sat beside this monument

Life's clearest hues are all vanished,

The golden wealth thou hadst of me is spent

The wind hath swept thy flowers their leaves are shed

The music is played out that with thee
went."

Peace, peace!" he cried I lost thee but, in truth,

There are worse losses than the loss of youth "

He said not what those losses were—but I—

But I must leave them, for the time draws near

Some lose not ONLY joy but memory

Of how it felt not love that was so dear

THE STAR'S MONUMENT

Lose only, but the steadfast certainty That once they had it, doubt comes on, then fear,
And after that despondency I wis
The Poet must have meant such loss as this

But while he sat and pondered on his
youth,
He said, "It did one deed that doth remain,
For it preserved the memory and the truth Of her that now doth neither set nor wane,
But shine in all men's thoughts, nor sink
forsooth,
And be forgotten like the summer rain.
O, it is good that man should not forget
Or benefits foregone or brightness set!"

He spoke and said, "My lot contenteth
me,
I am right glad for this her worthy
fame,
That which was good and great I fain would see Drawn with a halo round what rests—its name "

THE STAR S MONUMENT

This while the Poet said behold there came.

A workman with his tools anear the tree,
And when he read the words he paused
awhile

And pondered on them with a wondering smile.

And then he said, I pray you Sir what mean

The golden letters of this monument?"
I wonder quoth the Poet, Hast thou been A dweller near at hand, and their intent Hast neither heard by voice of fame nor
seen

The marble earlier?" Ay " said he and leant

Upon his spade to hear the tale then sigh
And say it was a marvel, and pass by Then said the Poet, This is strange to

me."

But as he mused with trouble in his mind,

A band of maids approached him leisurely Like vessels sailing with a favouring

And of their rosy lips requested he,

As one that for a doubt would solving find,

The tale, if tale there were, of that white
stone,
And those fair letters—"While she lived she shone"

Then like a fleet that floats becalmed they stay
"O, Sir," saith one, "this monument is old,

But we have heard our virtuous mothers say That by their mothers thus the tale was told

A Poet made it, journeying then away, He left us, and though some the meaning hold

For other than the ancient one, yet we Receive this legend for a certainty —

"There was a lily once, most purely white, Beneath the shadow of these boughs it
grew,

Its starry blossom it unclosed by night,
And a young Poet loved its shape and hue

He watched it nightly, 'twas so fair a sight,

Until a stormy wind arose and blew,
And when he came once more his flower to greet,

Its fallen petals drifted to his feet

And for his beautiful white lily's sake That she might be remembered where her scent
Had been right sweet he said that he would make
In her dear memory a monument
For she was purer than a driven flake Of snow and in her grace most excellent
The loveliest life that death did ever mar
As beautiful to gaze on as a star "

I thank you maid " the Poet answered
her
And I am glad that I have heard your tale."
With that they passed and as an inlander Having heard breakers raging in a gale
And falling down in thunder will aver That still when far away in grassy vale,
He seems to hear those seething waters bound So in his ears the maiden's voice did sound.

He leaned his face upon his hand and thought
And thought until a youth came by that way

And once again of him the Poet sought
The story of the star. But, well-a-day!
He said, "The meaning with much doubt is fraught,

The sense thereof can no man surely say,
For still tradition sways the common ear,
That of a truth a star did DISAPPEAR

"But they who look beneath the outer shell

That wraps the 'kernel of the people's lore',

Hold true for superstition, and they tell That seven lovely sisters dwelt of yore
In this old city, where it so befell

That one a Poet loved, that, further-
more,

As stars above us she was pure and good,
And fairest of that beauteous sisterhood.

"So beautiful they were, those virgins seven,

That all men called them clustered stars in song,

Forgetful that the stars abide in heaven

But woman bideth not beneath it long,
For O, alas! alas! one fated even,

When stars their azure deeps began to throng,

That virgin's eyes of Poet loved waxed
dim,
And all their lustrous shining waned to him,

In summer dusk she drooped her head and sighed Until what time the evening star went down,
And all the other stars did shining bide Clear in the lustre of their old renown And then—the virgin laid her down and died Forgot her youth forgot her beauty's crown,
Forgot the sisters whom she loved before And broke her Poet's heart for evermore."

A mournful tale in sooth," the lady saith
But did he truly grieve for evermore?"
It may be you forget," he answereth That this is but a fable at the core O the other fable." Though it be but breath "
She asketh was it true?" Then he
This lore,
Since it is fable, either way may go Then if it please you think it might be
so."

“Nay, but,” she saith, “if I had told
your tale,

The virgin should have lived his home to bless,

Or, must she die, I would have made to fail

His useless love ” “I tell you not the less,”

He sighs, “because it was of no avail

His heart the Poet would not dispossess Thereof But let us leave the fable now My Poet heard it with an aching brow

“And he made answer thus ‘I thank thee, youth,

Strange is thy story to these aged ears,
But I bethink me thou hast told a truth”

Under the guise of fable If my tears, Thou lost beloved star, lost now, forsooth, Indeed could bring thee back among thy peers,

So new thou shouldst be deemed as newly
seen,

For men forget that thou hast ever been ““There was a morning when I longed for fame,

There was a noontide when I passed it by,

THE STAR'S MONUMENT

There is an evening when I think not shame

Its substance and its being to deny For if men bear in mind great deeds the

Of him that wrought them shall they leave to die

Or if his name they shall have deathless writ,

They change the deeds that first ennobled it.

O golden letters of this monument!

O words to celebrate a loved renown Lost now or wrested! and to fancies lent

Or on a fabled forehead set for crown
For my departed star I am content,

Though legends dim and years her memory drown

For what were fame to her compared and set

By this great truth which ye make lustrous yet?

Adieu! the Poet said my vanished
star

Thy duty and thy happiness were one.
Work is heaven's best its fame is sub-lunar

The fame thou dost not need—the work is done.

For thee I am content that these things
are,
More than content were I, my race being run,
Might it be true of me, though none thereon Should muse regretful—While he lived he shone '

"So said, the Poet rose and went his way,
And that same lot he proved whereof he spake

Madam, my story is told out, the day Draws out her shadows, time doth overtake

The morning That which endeth call a lay,

Sung after pause—a motto in the break Between two chapters of a tale not new, Nor joyful—but a common tale Adieu!

"And that same God who made your face so fair,

And gave your woman's heart its tenderness,

So shield the blessing He implanted there,

That it may never turn to your distress,
And never cost you trouble or despair,

Nor granted leave the granter comfort-
less,

But like a river blest where'er it flows,
Be still receiving while it still bestows.

Adieu " he said, and paused while she sat mute

In the soft shadow of the apple-tree
The skylark's song rang like a joyous
flute,

The brook went prattling past her rest lessly

She let their tongues be her tongue's substitute

It was the wind that sighed it was not she

And what the lark, the brook, the wind, had said,

"We cannot tell, for none interpreted.

Their counsels might be hard to reconcile

They might not suit the moment or the spot.

She rose, and laid her work aside the while

Down in the sunshine of that grassy plot

She looked upon him with an almost smile

And held to him a hand that faltered
not.

One moment—bird and brook went warbling on,
And the wind sighed again—and he was gone

So quietly, as if she heard no more Or skylark in the azure overhead,
Or water slipping past the cressy shore,
Or wind that rose in sighs, and sighing fled—

So quietly, until the alders hoar Took him beneath them, till the downward spread Of planes engulfed him in their leafy seas—

She stood beneath her rose-flushed apple-trees

And then she stooped toward the mossy grass,

And gathered up her work and went her way,

Straight to that ancient turret she did pass,

And startle back some fawns that were at play

She did not sigh, she never said "Alas!"
Although he was her friend but still that day,

THE STAR S MONUMENT

Where elm and hornbeam spread a tower ing dome
She crossed the dells to her ancestral home.

And did she love him?—what if she did
not?

Then home was still the home of happiest years
Nor thought was exiled to partake his lot Nor heart lost courage through fore boding fears
Nor echo did against her secret plot, Nor music her betray to painful tears Nor life become a dream, and sunshine dim And riches poverty because of him.

But did she love him?—what and if she did?

Love cannot cool the burning Austral
sand
Nor show the secret waters that lie hid
In arid valleys of that desert land.
Love has no spells can scorching winds forbid,
Or bring the help which tarries near to hand,
Or spread a cloud for curtaining faded
eyes
That gaze up dying into alien skies.

A Dead Year

I took a year out of my life and story—A dead year, and said, "I will hew thee a tomb'

'All the kings of the nations lie in glory,' Cased in cedar, and shut in a sacred gloom,
Swathed in linen, and precious unguents old,
Painted with cinnabar, and rich with gold

"Silent they rest, in solemn salvatory, Sealed from the moth and the owl and the flittermouse—

Each with his name on his brow
'All the kings of the nations lie in glory,
Every one in his own house'
Then why not thou?

"Year," I said, "thou shalt not lack Bribes to bar thy coming back, Doth old Egypt wear her best In the chambers of her rest?

Doth she take to her last bed Beaten gold, and glorious red?
Envy not! for thou wilt wear
In the dark a shroud as fair Golden with the sunny ray Thou withdrawest from my day Wrought upon with colours fine Stolen from this life of mine Like the dusty Libyan kings, Lie with two wide-open wings
On thy breast as if to say On these wings hope flew away
And so housed and thus adorned,
Not forgotten but not scorned
Let the dark for evermore Close thee when I close the door
And the dust for ages fall
In the creases of thy pall
And no voice nor visit rude Break thy sealed solitude."

I took the year out of my life and story
The dead year and said, I have hewed
thee a tomb!

All the kings of the nations lie in glory
Cased in cedar and shut in a sacred
gloom;
But for the sword, and the sceptre and diadem

Sure thou didst reign like them "

So I laid her with those tyrants old and hoary,

According to my vow,
For I said, "The kings of the nations lie in glory,
And so shalt thou!"

"Rock," I said, "thy ribs are strong,
That I bring thee guard it long,
Hide the light from buried eyes — Hide it, lest the dead arise"

"Year," I said, and turned away,
"I am free of thee this day,
All that we two only know,
I forgive and I forgo,
So thy face no more I meet In the field or in the street"

Thus we parted, she and I,
Life hid death, and put it by,
Life hid death, and said, "Be free"
I have no more need of thee"
No more need! O mad mistake,
With repentance in its wake!
Ignorant, and rash, and blind,
Life had left the grave behind,
But had locked within its hold
With the spices and the gold,
All she had to keep her warm
In the raging of the storm

Scarce the sunset bloom was gone,
And the little stars outshone, Ere the dead year stiff and stark, Drew me to her in the dark Death drew life to come to her Beating at her sepulchre, Crying out, How can I part
With the best share of my heart?
Lo it lies upon the bier Captive with the buried year O my heart!" And I fell prone Weeping at the sealed stone Year among the shades " I said Since I live, and thou art dead Let my captive heart be free Like a bird to fly to me "
And I stayed some voice to win But none answered from within And I kissed the door—and night Deepened till the stars waxed bright And I saw them set and wane,
And the world turned green again.

So " I whispered, open door
I must tread this palace floor—Sealed palace rich and dim.
Let a narrow sunbeam swim After me and on me spread While I look upon my dead

Let a little warmth be free
To come after, let me see Through the doorway, when I sit Looking out, the swallows flit, Settling not till daylight goes,
Let me smell the wild white rose,
Smell the woodbine and the may,
Mark, upon a sunny day,
Sated from their blossoms rise Honey-bees and butterflies Let me hear, O! let me hear,
Sitting by my buried year, Finches chirping to their young,
And the little noises flung
Out of clefts where rabbits play, Or from falling water-spray,
And the gracious echoes woke By man's work the woodman's stroke,
Shout of shepherd, whistlings blithe,
And the whetting of the scythe,
Let this be, lest, shut and furled
From the well-beloved world,
I forget her yearnings old,
And her troubles manifold, Strivings sore, submissions meet,
And my pulse no longer beat,
Keeping time and bearing part With the pulse of her great heart

So! swing open door and shade Take me I am not afraid,
For the time will not be long Soon I shall have waxen strong—Strong enough my own to win From the grave it lies within."

And I entered. On her bier Quiet lay the buried year
I sat down where I could see Life without and sunshine free, Death within. And I between Waited my own heart to wean
From the shroud that shaded her In the rock-hewn sepulchre—Waited till the dead should say Heart, be free of me this day — Waited with a patient will—
AND I WAIT BETWEEN THEM STILL.

I take the year back to my life and story
The dead year and say I will share in thy tomb.

All the kings of the nations lie in glory
Cased in cedar and shut in a sacred gloom!
They reigned, in their lifetime with sceptre and diadem,

But thou excellest them

For life doth make thy grave her oratory,
And the crown is still on thy brow,
'All the kings of the nations lie in glory',
And so dost thou "

Reflections

WRITTEN FOR "THE PORTFOLIO SOCIETY"
JULY 8th

Looking over a Gate at a Pool in a Field

What change has made the pastures sweet And reached the daisies at my feet

And cloud that wears a golden hem?
This lovely world, the hills, the sward—
They all look fresh as if our Lord
But yesterday had finished them

And here is the field with light aglow
How fresh its boundary lime-trees show

And how its wet leaves trembling shine!
Between their trunks come through to me
The morning sparkles of the sea
Below the level browsing line.

I see the pool more clear by half Than pools where other waters laugh Up at the breasts of coot and rail.

REFLECTIONS

There, as she passed it on her way,
I saw reflected yesterday

A maiden with a milking-pail

There, neither slowly nor in haste,
One hand upon her slender waist,

The other lifted to her pail,
She rosy in the morning light,
Among the water-daisies white,

Like some fair sloop appeared to sail

Against her ankles as she trod,
The lucky buttercups did nod

I leaned upon the gate to see The sweet thing looked, but did not speak,
A dimple came in either cheek,

And all my heart was gone from me

Then, as I lingered on the gate,
And she came up like coming fate,

I saw my picture in her eyes—
Clear dancing eyes, more black than sloes, Cheeks like the mountain pink, that grows Among white-headed majesties

I said, "A tale was made of old
That I would fain to thee unfold,

Ah! let me—let me tell the tale "
But high she held her comely head,

"I cannot heed it now," she said,
"For carrying of the milking-pail "

She laughed. What good to make ado?
I held the gate, and she came through And took her homeward path anon
From the clear pool her face had fled It rested on my heart instead Reflected when the maid was gone.

With happy youth and work content
So sweet and stately on she went Right careless of the untold tale Each step she took I loved her more And followed to her dairy door
The maiden with the milking-pail

For hearts where wakened love doth lurk
How fine how blest a thing is work!
For work does good when reasons fail—Good yet the axe at every stroke
The echo of a name awoke—
Her name is Mary Martindale.

I'm glad that echo was not heard Aright by other men a bird Knows doubtless what his own notes tell And I know not but I can say I felt as shamefaced all that day
As if folks heard her name right well.

And when the west began to glow
I went—I could not choose but go—To that same dairy on the hill,
And while sweet Mary moved about Within, I came to her without,
 And leaned upon the window-sill

The garden border where I stood Was sweet with pinks and southernwood
 I spoke—her answer seemed to fail
I smelt the pinks—I could not see,
The dusk came down and sheltered me,
 And in the dusk she heard my tale

And what is left that I should tell?
I begged a kiss, I pleaded well
 The rosebud lips did long decline,
But yet I think, I think 'tis true,
That, leaned at last into the dew,
 One little instant they were mine

O life! how dear thou hast become She laughed at dawn, and I was dumb, But evening counsels best prevail Fair shine the blue that o'er her spreads, Green be the pastures where she treads,
 The maiden with the milking-pail!

The Letter L

ABSENT

We sat on grassy slopes that meet With sudden dip the level strand
The trees hung overhead—our feet
Were on the sand.

Two silent girls, a thoughtful man,
We sunned ourselves in open light And felt such April airs as fan
The Isle of Wight

And smelt the wallflower in the crag Whereon that dainty waft had fed, Which made the bell-hung cowslip wag
Her delicate head

And let alighting jackdaws fleet
Adown it open-winged and pass Till they could touch with outstretched feet
The warmed grass.

THE LETTER L

The happy wave ran up and rang Like service bells a long way off,
And down a little freshet sprang
From mossy trough,

And splashed into a rain of spray,
And fretted on with daylight's loss, Because so many blue-bells lay Leaning across

Blue martins gossiped in the sun,
And pairs of chattering daws flew by,
And sailing brigs rocked softly on In company

Wild cherry boughs above us spread
The whitest shade was ever seen,
And flicker, flicker, came and fled Sun spots between

Bees murmured in the milk-white bloom
As babes will sigh for deep content When their sweet hearts for peace make room,
As given, not lent

And we saw on we said no word,
And one was lost in muskings rare,
One buoyant as the waft that stirred Her shining hair

THE LETTER L

His eyes were bent upon the sand Unfathomed deeps within them lay A slender rod was in his hand—
A hazel spray

Her eyes were resting on his face,
As shyly glad, by stealth to glean Impressions of his manly grace And guarded men

The mouth with steady sweetness set And eyes conveying unaware
The distant hint of some regret That harboured there.

He gazed, and in the tender flush That made her face like roses blown And in the radiance and the hush Her thought was shown.

It was a happy thing to sit
So near nor mar his reverie
He looked not for a part in it,
So meek was she.

But it was solace for her eyes
And for her heart that yearned to him To watch apart in loving wise
Those musings dim.

THE LETTER L

Lost—lost, and gone! The Pelham woods Were full of doves that cooed at ease,
The orchis filled her purple hoods For dainty bees

He heard not, all the delicate air
Was fresh with falling water-spray It mattered not—he was not there,
But far away

Till with the hazel in his hand,
Still drowned in thought, it thus befell,
He drew a letter on the sand—
The letter L

And looking on it, straight there wrought
A ruddy flush about his brow,
His letter woke him absent thought Rushed homeward now

And half-abashed, his hasty touch Effaced it with a tell-tale care,
As if his action had been much,
And not his air

And she? she watched his open palm Smooth out the letter from the sand,
And rose, with aspect almost calm,
And filled her hand

THE LETTER L

With cherry bloom and moved away
To gather wild forget-me-not And let her errant footsteps stray
To one sweet spot.

As if she coveted the fair
White lining of the silver weed
And cuckoo-pint that shaded there Empurpled seed.

She had not feared, as I divine,
Because she had not hoped. Alas!
The sorrow of it! for that sign Came but to pass

And yet it robbed her of the right To give who looked not to receive,
And made her blush in love's despite That she should grieve.

A shape in white she turned to gaze
Her eyes were shaded with her hand And half way up the winding ways
We saw her stand.

Green hollows of the fringed cliff Red rocks that under waters show Blue roaches and a sailing skiff Were spread below

THE LETTER L

She stood to gaze, perhaps to sigh, Perhaps to think, but who can tell,
How heavy on her heart must lie
The letter L!

She came anon with quiet grace,
And "What," she murmured, "silent yet!"
He answered, "'Tis a haunted place,
And spell-beset

"O speak to us, and break the spell!"
"The spell is broken," she replied
"I crossed the running brook, it fell,
It could not bide

"And I have brought a budding world,
Of orchis spires and daisies rank,
And ferny plumes but half uncurled,
From yonder bank,

"And I shall weave of them a crown,
And at the well-head launch it free,
That so the brook may float it down,
And out to sea

"There may it to some English hands From fairy meadow seem to come,
The fairiest of fairy lands—
The land of home "

THE LETTER L

Weave on," he said and as she wove We told how currents in the deep With branches from a lemon grove Blue bergs will sweep.

And messages from shipwrecked folk Will navigate the moon-led main And painted boards of splintered oak Their port regain.

Then floated out by vagrant thought,
My soul beheld on torrid sand
The wasteful water set at nought Man's skilful hand

And suck out gold-dust from the box,
And wash it down in weedy whirls,
And split the wine-keg on the rocks,
And lose the pearls.

Ah! why to that which needs it not " Methought, should costly things be given?
How much is wasted, wrecked forgot On this side heaven!"

So musing did mine ears awake
To maiden tones of sweet reserve And manly speech that seemed to make The steady curve

THE LETTER L

Of lips that uttered it defer

Their guard, and soften for the thought She listened, and his talk with her Was fancy fraught

“There is not much in liberty”—

With doubtful pauses he began,
And said to her and said to me,
“There was a man—

“There was a man who dreamed one night

That his dead father came to him,
And said, when fire was low, and light
Was burning dim—

“‘Why vagrant thus, my sometime pride, Unloved, unloving, wilt thou roam?’
Sure home is best!’ The son replied, ‘I have no home’

“‘Shall not I speak?’ his father said, ‘Who early chose a youthful wife,
And worked for her, and with her led My happy life

“‘Ay, I will speak, for I was young As thou art now, when I did hold The prattling sweetness of thy tongue Dearer than gold,

THE LETTER L

And rosy from thy noonday sleep
Would bear thee to admiring kin And all thy pretty looks would keep My heart within.

Then after mid thy young allies—
For thee ambition flushed my brow—
I coveted the schoolboy prize Far more than thou.

I thought for thee I thought for all My gamesome imps that round me grew The dews of blessing heaviest fall Where care falls too.

And I that sent my boys away
In youthful strength to earn their bread
And died before the hair was grey Upon my head—

I say to thee, though free from care
A lonely lot, an aimless life,
The crowning comfort is not there—Son, take a wife.

Father beloved, the son replied
And failed to gather to his breast With arms in darkness searching wide The formless guest.

THE LETTER L

“ ‘I am but free, as sorrow is,
To dry her tears, to laugh, to talk,
And free, as sick men are, I wis
To rise and walk

“ ‘And free, as poor men are, to buy,
If they have nought wherewith to pay, Nor hope, the debt before they die,
To wipe away

“ ‘What ’vails it there are wives to win,
And faithful hearts for those to yearn,
Who find not aught thereto akin
To make return?

“ ‘Shall he take much who little gives,
And dwells in spirit far away,
When she that in his presence lives,
Doth never stray,

“ ‘But waking, guideth as beseems
The happy house in order trim,
And tends her babes, and sleeping, dreams
Of them, and him?

“ ‘O base, O cold,’—while thus he spake
The dream broke off, the vision fled,
He carried on his speech awake
And sighing said—

THE LETTER L

I had—ah happy man!—I had A precious jewel in my breast,
And while I kept it I was glad
At work, at rest!

Call it a heart, and call it strong As upward stroke of eagle's wing Then call it weak, you shall not wrong
The beating thing

In tangles of the jungle reed Whose heats are lit with tiger eyes,
In shipwreck drifting with the weed Neath rainy skies,

Still youthful manhood fresh and keen
At danger gazed with awed delight,
As if sea would not drown I ween Nor serpent bite.

I had—ah happy! but tis gone,
The priceless jewel one came by
And saw and stood awhile to con
With curious eye

And wished for it and faintly smiled
From under lashes black as doom With subtle sweetness tender mild That did illumine

THE LETTER L

“ ‘The perfect face, and shed on it
A charm, half feeling, half surprise,
And brim with dreams the exquisite Brown blessed eyes

“ ‘Was it for this, no more but this,
I took and laid it in her hand,
By dimples ruled, to hint submiss,
By frown unmanned?

“ ‘It was for this—and O farewell
The fearless foot, the present mind,
And steady will to breast the swell
And face the wind!

“ ‘I gave the jewel from my breast, She played with it a little while
As I sailed down into the west, Fed by her smile,

“ ‘Then weary of it—far from land,
With sigh as deep as destiny,
She let it drop from her fair hand
Into the sea,

“ ‘And watched it sink, and I—and I What shall I do, for all is vain?
No wave will bring, no gold will buy,
No toil attain,

THE LETTER L

Nor any diver reach to raise My jewel from the blue abyss Or could they still I should but praise
Their work amiss.

Thrown thrown away! But I love yet
The fair fair hand which did the deed That wayward sweetness to forget Were bitter meed.

No let it lie, and let the wave Roll over it for evermore Whelmed where the sailor hath his grave—
The sea her store.

My heart my sometime happy heart!
And O for once let me complain,
I must forgo life's better part—Man's dearer gain.

I worked afar that I might rear
A peaceful home on English soil
I laboured for the gold and gear—
I loved my toil

For ever in my spirit spake
The natural whisper 'Well 't will be When loving wife and children break Their bread with thee!

THE LETTER L

“ ‘The gathered gold is turned to dross,
The wife hath faded into air,
My heart is thrown away, my loss
I cannot spare

“ ‘Not spare unsated thought her food—
No, not one rustle of the fold, Nor scent of eastern sandalwood,
Nor gleam of gold,

“ ‘Nor quaint devices of the shawl, Far less the drooping lashes meek,
The gracious figure, lithe and tall,
The dimpled cheek,

“ ‘And all the wonders of her eyes,
And sweet caprices of her air, Albeit, indignant reason cries, ‘Fool! have a care

“ ‘ ‘Fool, join not madness to mistake, Thou knowest she loved thee not a whit,
Only that she thy heart might break—
She wanted it,

“ ‘ ‘Only the conquered thing to chain
So fast that none might set it free, Nor other woman there might reign
And comfort thee

THE LETTER L

Robbed robbed of life's illusions sweet Love dead outside her closed door
And passion fainting at her feet
To wake no more

What canst thou give that unknown bride
Whom thou didst work for in the waste Ere fated love was born and cried—
Was dead ungraced?

No more but this the partial care,
The natural kindness for its own,
The trust that waxeth unaware,
As worth is known

Observance and complacent thought Indulgent, and the honour due That many another man has brought Who brought love too.

Nay then, forbid it Heaven! he said
The saintly vision fades from me O bands and chains! I cannot wed—
I am not free. "

With that he raised his face to view
What think you," asking of my tale?
And was he right to let the dew
Of morn exhale,

THE LETTER L

“And burdened in the noontide sun,
The grateful shade of home forgo—Could he be right—I ask as one Who fain would know?”

He spoke to her and spoke to me,
The rebel rose-hue dyed her cheek,
The woven crown lay on her knee,
She would not speak

And I with doubtful pause—averse To let occasion drift away—
I answered—“If his case were worse Than word can say,

“Time is a healer of sick hearts,
And women have been known to choose,
With purpose to allay their smarts,
And tend their bruise,

“These for themselves Content to give,
In their own lavish love complete, Taking for sole prerogative Their tendance sweet

“Such meeting in their diadem Of crowning love’s æthéreal fire, Himself he robs who robbeth them
Of their desire

THE LETTER L

Therefore the man who dreaming cried Against his lot that evensong
I judge him honest and decide That he was wrong "

When I am judged, ah may my fate "
He whispered in thy code be read!
Be thou both judge and advocate."
Then turned, he said—

Fair weaver!" touching while he spoke,
The woven crown, the weaving hand
And do you this decree revoke,
Or may it stand?

Thus friend, you ever think her right—
She is not wrong then?" Soft and low
The little trembling word took flight
She answered No."

PRESENT

A meadow where the grass was deep Rich square, and golden to the view
A belt of elms with level sweep About it grew

The sun beat down on it, the line
Of shade was clear beneath the trees
There by a clustering eglantine
We sat at ease.

THE LETTER L

And O the buttercups' that field O' the cloth of gold, where pennons swam—

Where France set up his lily shield,
His oriflamme,

And Henry's lion-standard rolled
What was it to their matchless sheen, Their million million drops of gold Among the green'

We sat at ease in peaceful trust,
For he had written, "Let us meet,
My wife grew tired of smoke and dust,
And London heat,

"And I have found a quiet grange, Set back in meadows sloping west,
And there our little ones can range
And she can rest

"Come down, that we may show the view,
And she may hear your voice again,
And talk her woman's talk with you Along the lane."

Since he had drawn with listless hand
The letter, six long years had fled,
And winds had blow about the sand,
And they were wed

THE LETTER L

Two rosy urchins near him played,
Or watched, entranced the shapely ships That with his knife for them he made Of elder alps.

And where the flowers were thickest shed Each blossom like a burnished gem
A creeping baby reared its head And cooed at them.

And calm was on the father's face,
And love was in the mother's eyes
She looked and listened from her place,
In tender wise.

She did not need to raise her voice
' That they might hear she sat so nigh Yet we could speak when 't was our choice
And soft reply

Holding our quiet talk apart
Of household things till all unsealed
The guarded outworks of the heart Began to yield

And much that prudence will not dip
The pen to fix and send away Passed safely over from the lip That summer day

THE LETTER L

"I should be happy," with a look Towards her husband where he lay Lost in the pages of his book, Soft did she say

"I am, and yet no lot below
For one whole day eludeth care,
To marriage all the stories flow,
And finish there

"As if with marriage came the end,
The entrance into settled rest,
The calm to which love's tossings tend,
The quiet breast

"For me love played the low preludes, Yet life began but with the ring,
Such infinite solitudes Around it cling

"I did not for my heart divine
Her destiny so meek to grow,
The higher nature matched with mine Will have it so

"Still I consider it, and still Acknowledge it my master made, Above me by the steadier will Of nought afraid

Above me by the candid speech
The temperate judgment of its own
The keener thoughts that grasp and reach,
At things unknown.

But I look up and he looks down,
And thus our married eyes can meet Unclouded his, and clear of frown
And gravely sweet.

And yet, O good, O wise and true!
I would for all my fealty
That I could be as much to you As you to me

And knew the deep secure content
Of wives who have been hardly won,
And, long petitioned gave assent, Jealous of none.

But proudly sure in all the earth
No other in that homage shares Nor other woman's face or worth Is prized as theirs."

I said *And yet no lot below
For one whole day eludeth care
Your thought."* She answered, Even so.
I would beware

THE LETTER L

"Regretful questionings, be sure That very seldom do they rise, Nor for myself do I endure—
I sympathize

"For once"—she turned away her head, Across the grass she swept her hand—
"There was a letter once," she said,
"Upon the sand "

"There was, in truth, a letter writ
On sand," I said, "and swept from view, But that same hand which fashioned it Is given to you

"Efface the letter, wherefore keep An image which the sands forgo?"
"Albeit that fear had seemed to sleep," She answered low,

"I could not choose but wake it now,
For do but turn aside your face,
A house on yonder hilly brow
Your eyes may trace

"The chestnut shelters it, ah me,
That I should have so fared a heart' But yestereve, as by the sea
I sat apart,

THE LETTER L

I heard a name I saw a hand
Of passing stranger point that way—
And will he meet her on the strand,
When late we stray?

For she is come, for she is there,
I heard it in the dusk, and heard Admiring words, that named her fair
But little stirred

By beauty of the wood and wave,
And weary of an old man's sway
For it was sweeter to enslave Than to obey

—The voice of one that near us stood,
The rustle of a silken fold
A scent of eastern sandalwood,
A gleam of gold!

A lady! In the narrow space Between the husband and the wife, But nearest him—she showed a face With dangers rife

A subtle smile that dimpling fled As night-black lashes rose and fell I looked and to myself I said
The letter L.

THE LETTER L

He, too, looked up, and with arrest
Of breath and motion held his gaze, Nor cared to hide within his breast
His deep amaze,

Nor spoke till on her near advance
His dark cheek flushed a ruddier hue,
And with his change of countenance Hers altered too

“Lenore!” his voice was like the cry Of one entreating, and he said
But that—then paused with such a sigh
As mourns the dead

And seated near, with no demur
Of bashful doubt she silence broke, Though I alone could answer her When first she spoke

She looked her eyes were beauty’s own, She shed their sweetness into his,
Nor spared the married wife one moan That bitterest is

She spoke, and lo, her loveliness Methought she damaged with her tongue,
And every sentence made it less,
So false they rung,

THE LETTER L

The rallying voice, the light demand Half flippant, half unsatisfied
The vanity sincere and bland—
The answers wide.

And now her talk was of the East
And next her talk was of the sea
And has the love for it increased You shared with me?"

He answered not but grave and still With earnest eyes her face perused, And locked his lips with steady will
As one that mused—

That mused and wondered. Why his gaze Should dwell on her methought was plain
But reason that should wonder raise
I sought in vain.

And near and near the children drew Attracted by her rich array And gems that trembling into view Like raindrops lay

He spoke the wife her baby took
And pressed the little face to hers What pain so^oer her bosom shook What jealous stirs

THE LETTER L

Might stab her heart, she hid them so,
The cooing babe a veil supplied,
And if she listened none might know,
Or if she sighed,

Or if forecasting grief and care Unconscious solace thence she drew,
And lulled her babe, and unaware Lulled sorrow too

The lady, she interpreter
For looks or language wanted none, If yet dominion stayed with her—
So lightly won,

If yet the heart she wounded sore Could yearn to her, and let her see The homage that was evermore Disloyalty,

If sign would yield that it had bled,
Or rallied from the faithless blow,
Or sick or sullen stooped to wed,
She craved to know

Now dreamy deep, now sweetly keen,
Her asking eyes would round him shine,
But guarded lips and settled mien Refused the sign

THE LETTER L

And unbeguiled and unbetrayed
The wonder yet within his breast
It seemed a watchful part he played Against her quest.

Until with accent of regret She touched upon the past once more,
As if she dared him to forget His dream of yore.

And words of little weight let fall
The fancy of the lower mind How waxing life must needs leave all Its best behind

How he had said that he would fain
• (One morning on the halcyon sea)
That life would at a stand remain Eternally

And sails be mirrored in the deep
As then they were, for evermore And happy spirits wake and sleep Afar from shore

The well-contented heart be fed Ever as they and all the world (It were not small) unshadowed When sails were furled.

THE LETTER L

"Your words"—a pause, and quietly With touch of calm self-ridicule
"It may be so—for then," said he,
"I was a fool"

With that he took his book, and left An awkward silence to my care,
That soon I filled with questions deft
And debonair,

And slid into an easy vein,
The favourite picture of the year,
The grouse upon her lord's domain—
The salmon weir,

Till she could feign a sudden thought Upon neglected guests, and rise,
And make us her adieux, with nought
In her dark eyes

Acknowledging or shame or pain,
But just unveiling for our view
A little smile of still disdain
As she withdrew

Then nearer did the sunshine creep,
And warmer came the wafting breeze,
The little babe was fast asleep
On mother's knees

THE LETTER L

Fair was the face that o'er it leant
The cheeks with beauteous blushes dyed
The downcast lashes, shyly bent,
That failed to hide

Some tender shame. She did not see She felt his eyes that would not stir She looked upon her babe, and he So looked at her

So grave, so wondering so content,
As one new waked to conscious life,
Whose sudden joy with fear is blent
He said "My wife."

My wife, how beautiful you are!"
Then closer at her side reclined,
The bold brown woman from afar Comes, to me blind.

And by comparison I see
The majesty of matron grace,
And learn how pure, how fair can be My own wife's face

Pure with all faithful passion fair With tender smiles that come and go And comforting as April air After the snow

THE LETTER L

"Fool that I was! my spirit frets
And marvels at the humbling truth,
That I have deigned to spend regrets On my bruised youth

"Its idol mocked thee, seated nigh, And shamed me for the mad mistake,
I thank my God He could deny,
And she forsake

"Ah, who am I, that God hath saved Me from the doom I did desire,
And crossed the lot myself had craved,
To set me higher?

"What have I done that He should bow From heaven to choose a wife for me?
And what deserved, He should endow My home with THEE?

"My wife!" With that she turned her
face
To kiss the hand about her neck,
And I went down and sought the place Where leaped the beck—

The busy beck, that still would run
And fall, and falter its refrain,
And pause and shimmer in the sun,
And fall again

THE LETTER L

It led me to the sandy shore
We sang together it and I—
The daylight comes, the dark is o'er The shadows fly "

I lost it on the sandy shore
O wife!" its latest murmurs fall
O wife be glad and fear no more
The letter L

The High Tide
on the Coast of Lincolnshire (1571)

The old mayor climbed the belfry tower,
The ringers ran by two, by three, “Pull if ye never pulled before, Good ringers, pull your best,” quoth
he

“Play uppe, play uppe, O Boston bells' Ply all your changes, all your swells, Play uppe ‘The Brides of Enderby’ ”

Men say it was a stolen tyde—

The Lord that sent it, He knows all,
But in myne ears doth still abide

The message that the bells let fall And there was nought of strange, beside The flights of mews and peewits pied By millions crouched on the old sea wall

I sat and spun within the doore, My thread brake off, I raised myne
eyes,

THE HIGH TIDE

The level sun like ruddy ore,
Lay sinking in the barren skies
And dark against day's golden death
She moved where Lindis wandereth
My sonne's faire wife, Elizabeth.

Cusha! Cusha! Cusha!" calling Ere the early dews were falling Farre away I heard her song Cusha! Cusha!" all along;
Where the reedy Liodis floweth Floweth floweth,
From the meads where melick groweth
Faintly came her milking song—

Cusha! Cusha! Cusha!" calling
For the dews will soone be falling Leave your meadow grasses mellow
Mellow mellow
Quit your cowslips, cowslips yellow Come uppe Whitefoot, come uppe Light foot
Quit the stalks of parsley hollow
Hollow hollow;
Come uppe Jetty rise and follow
From the clovers lift your head Come uppe Whitefoot come uppe Light
foot
Come uppe Jetty rise and follow
Jetty to the milking shed."

THE HIGH TIDE

It it be long, ay, long ago,
When I beginne to think howe long, Againe I hear the Lindis flow, Swift as an arrowe, sharpe and strong,
And all the aire, it seemeth mee, Bin full of floating bells (sayth shee),
That ring the tune of Enderby

Alle fresh the level pasture lay,
And not a shadowe mote be seene,
Save where full fyve good miles away The steeple towered from out the greene,
And lo! the great bell farre and wide Was heard in all the country side That Saturday at eventide

The swanherds where their sedges are , Moved on in sunset's golden breath,
The shepherde lads I heard afarre,
And my sonne's wife, Elizabeth,
Till floating o'er the grassy sea Came downe that kyndly message free,
The "Brides of Mavis Enderby"

Then some looked uppe into the sky,
And all along where Lindis flows
To where the goodly vessels lie,
And where the lordly steeple shows They sayde, " And why should this thing be?

THE HIGH TIDE

What danger lowers by land or sea?
They ring the tune of Enderby!

For evil news from Mablethorpe,
Of pyrate galleys warping down
For shippes ashore beyond the scope They have not spared to wake the towne
But while the west bin red to see,
And storms be none, and pyrates flee Why ring The Brides of Enderby?"

I looked without, and lo! my sonne Came riding downe with might and main
He raised a shout as he drew on,
Till all the welkin rang again Elizabeth! Elizabeth!"
(A sweeter woman no er drew breath Than my sonne's wife Elizabeth.)

The olde sea wall (he cried) is downe,
The rising tide comes on apace
And boats adrift in yonder towne Go sailing uppe the market place."
He shook as one that looks on death God save you mother!" straight he smith
Where is my wife, Elizabeth?"

THE HIGH TIDE

"Good sonne, where Lindis winds away, With her two barns I marked her
long,

And ere yon bells beganne to play Afair I heard her milking song "

He looked across the grassy lea, To right, to left, "Ho Enderby!"
They ring "The Brides of Enderby"!

With that he cried and beat his breast,
For, lo! along the river's bed

A mighty cygre reared his crest,

And uppe the Lindis raging sped
It swept with thunderous noises loud, Shaped like a curling snow-white cloud,
Or like a demon in a shroud

And rearing Lindis backward pressed

Shook ill her trembling bankes amaine, Then madly at the cygre's breast

Flung uppe her weltering walls again Then bankes came downe with ruin and rout—

Then beaten foam flew around about—

Then all the mighty floods were out

So farre, so fast the cygre drave,

The heart had hardly tyme to beat,
Before a shallow seething wave

Sobbed in the grasses at oure feet

THE HIGH TIDE

The feet had hardly time to flee
Before it brake against the knee
And all the world was in the sea.

Upon the roose we sate that night
The noise of bells went sweeping by I marked the lofty beacon light Stream from the church tower red and
high—
A lurid mark and dread to see
And awesome bells they were to mee,
That in the dark rang "Enderby."

They rang the sailor lads to guide From roose to roose who fearless rowed And I—my sonne was at my side
And yet the ruddy beacon glowed
And yet he moaned beneath his breath Oh come in life, or come in death!
O lost! my love, Elizabeth."

And didst thou visit him no more?
Thou didst, thou didst, my daughter deare
The waters laid thee at his doore Ere yet the early dawn was clear Thy pretty bairns in fast embrace
The lifted sun shone on thy face Downe drifted to thy dwelling-place

THE HIGH TIDE

That flow strewed wrecks about the grass,

That ebbe swept out the flocks to sea,
A fatal ebbe and flow, alas !

To manye more than myne and mee
But each will mourn his own (she saith)
And sweeter woman ne'er drew breath
Than my sonne's wife, Elizabeth

I shall never hear her more
By the reedy Lindis shore,
"Cusha ! Cusha ! Cusha !" calling,
Ere the early dewes be falling ,
I shall never hear her song,
"Cusha ! Cusha !" all along
Where the sunny Lindis floweth, Goeth, floweth,
From the meads where melick groweth,
When the water winding down, Onward floweth to the town

I shall never see her more
Where the reeds and rushes quiver, Shiver, quiver,
Stand beside the sobbing river, Sobbing, throbbing, in its falling To the sandy lonesome shore,
I shall never hear her calling,
"Leave your meadow grasses mellow,
Mellow, mellow ,

Quit your cowlips, cowlips yellow Come uppe Whitefoot come uppe Light
foot

Quit your pipes of parsley hollow
Hollow hollow

Come uppe Lightfoot, rise and follow Lightfoot, Whitefoot

From your clovers lift the head
Come uppe Jetty follow follow
Jetty to the milking shed."

Afternoon at a Parsonage

(The Parson's Brother, Sister, and Two Children)

Preface

What wonder man should fail to stay
A nurseling wafted from above,
The growth celestial come astray,
That tender growth whose name is Love !

It is as if high winds in heaven
Had shaken the celestial trees,
And to this earth below had given Some feathered seeds from one of these

O perfect love that 'dureth long !
Dear growth, that shaded by the palms,
And breathed on by the angel's song, Blooms on in heaven's eternal calms !

AFTERNOON AT A PARSONAGE

How great the task to guard thee here, Where wind is rough and frost is keen
And all the ground with doubt and fear Is chequered birth and death between!

Space is against thee—it can part Time is against thee—it can chill Words—they but render half the heart Deeds—they are poor to our rich will.

Merton, Though she had loved me I had never bound Her beauty to my darkness that had been Too hard for her Sadder to look so near
Into a face all shadow than to stand Aloof and then withdraw and afterwards Suffer forgetfulness to comfort her I think so and I loved her therefore I Have no complaint albeit she is not
mine
And yet—and yet, withdrawing I would fain
She would have pleaded duty—would have
said
My father wills it " would have turned away

AFTERNOON AT A PARSONAGE

As lingering, or unwillingly, for then She would have done no damage to the past

Now she has roughly used it—flung it down

And brushed its bloom away If she had
said,

“Sir, I have promised, therefore, lo’ my hand”—

Would I have taken it? Ah no’ by all Most sacred, no’

I would for my sole share
Have taken first her recollected blush
The day I won her, next her shining
tears—

The tears of our long parting, and for all The rest—her cry, her bitter heart-sick cry,

That day or night (I know not which it was,

The days being always night), that darkest
night,

When being led to her I heard her cry, “O blind’ blind’ blind’”

Go with thy chosen mate
The fashion of thy going nearly cured
The sorrow of it I am yet so weak That half my thoughts go after thee, but not

So weak that I desire to have it so

AFTERNOON AT A PARSONAGE

JESSIE, seated at the piano, sings

When the dimpled water slippeth Full of laughter on its way
And her wing the wagtail dippeth Running by the brink at play;
When the poplar leaves tremble Turn their edges to the light,
And the far-up clouds resemble Veils of gauze most clear and white;
And the sunbeams fall and flatter Woodland moss and branches brown And the glossy flocks chatter
Up and down, up and down
Though the heart be not attending Having music of her own
On the grass, through meadows wending
It is sweet to walk alone.
When the falling waters utter Something mournful on their way
And departing swallows flutter Taking leave of bank and brae;
When the chaffinch idly sitteth
With her mate upon the sheaves,
And the wistful robin sitteth Over beds of yellow leaves;
When the clouds, like ghosts that ponder Evil fate, float by and frown
And the listless wind doth wander
Up and down, up and down:
Though the heart be not attending Having sorrows of her own

AFTERNOON AT A PARSONAGE

Through the fields and fallows wending,
It is sad to walk alone

Merton Blind ! blind ! blind !
Oh ! sitting in the dark for evermore,
And doing nothing—putting out a hand
To feel what lies about me, and to say Not “This is blue or red,” but “This is cold,
And this the sun is shining on, and this I know not till they tell its name to
me ”

O that I might behold once more, my God !
The shining rulers of the night and day ,
Or a star twinkling , or an almond-tree, Pink with her blossom and alive with bees, Standing against the azure ! O my sight !
Lost, and yet living in the sunlit cells
Of memory—that only lightsome place Where lingers yet the dayspring of my
youth
The years of mourning for thy death are
long

Be kind, sweet memory ! O^c desert me not !
For oft thou show'st me lucent opal seas,

AFTERNOON AT A PARSONAGE

Fringed with their cocoa-palms, and dwarf red crags Whereon the placid moon doth rest her chin";
For oft by favour of thy visitings
I feel the dimness of an Indian night, And lo! the sun is coming Red as
rust
Between the latticed blind his presence burns
A ruby ladder running up the wall;
And all the dust printed with pigeons
feet
Is reddened and the crows that stalk
near Begin to trail for heat their glossy
wings,
And the red flowers give back at once the dew
For night is gone and day is born so fast
And is so strong that huddled us in flight
The fleeing darkness paleth to a shade
And while she calls to sleep and dreams Come on "
Suddenly waked the sleepers rub their
eyes
Which having opened lo! she is no
more.

• AFTERNOON AT A PARSONAGE

O misery and mourning! I have felt—Yes, I have felt like some deserted world That God had done with, and had cast aside

To rock and stagger through the gulfs of space,

He never looking on it any more—Untilled, no use, no pleasure, not desired, Nor lighted on by angels in their flight From heaven to happier planets, and the race

That once had dwelt on it withdrawn or dead

Could such a world have hope that some blest day

God would remember her, and fashion her Anew?

Jessie What, dearest? Did you speak
to me?

Child I think he spoke to us

M No, little elves,

You were so quiet that I half forgot

Your neighbourhood What are you doing there?

J They sit together on the window-mat Nursing their dolls

C Yes, Uncle, our new dolls—
Our best dolls, that you gave us

M Did you say
The afternoon was bright?

AFTERNOON IT IS PERSONAGE

J Yes bright indeed!
The sun is on the plane-tree and it flames—
All red and orange.

C I can see my father—Look! look! the leaves are falling on his gown.

M Where?

C In the churchyard, Uncle—he is gone
He passed behind the tower

M I heard a bell
There is a funeral then behind the church,

2nd Child. Are the trees sorry when their leaves drop off?

1st Child. You talk such silly words — no not at all.

There goes another leaf

2nd Child. I did not see 1st Child. Look! on the grass between the little hills,

Just where they planted Amy

J Amy died—
Dear little Amy! when you talk of her Say she is gone to heaven.

2nd Child. They planted her—Will she come up next year?

1st Child. No, not so soon But some day God will call her to come up

, AFTERNOON AT A PARSONAGE

And then she will Papa knows everything—

He said she would before he planted her 2nd Child It was at night she went to heaven Last night

We saw a star before we went to bed 1st Child Yes, Uncle, did you know?

A large bright star,
And at her side she had some little ones—
Some young ones

M Young ones' no, my little maid, Those stars are very old 1st Child What' all of them?

M Yes

1st Child Older than our father?

M Older, far

2nd Child They must be tired of shining there so long

Perhaps they wish they might come down
J Perhaps'

Dear children, talk of what you understand Come, I must lift the trailing creepers up That last night's wind has loosened

1st Child May we help?

Aunt, may we help to nail them?

J We shall see

Go, find and bring the hammer, and some shreds

AFTERNOON IT A PERSONAGE

[Steps outside the window lifts a branch and sings]

Should I change my allegiance for rancour If fortune changes her side?
Or should I like a vessel at anchor Turn with the turn of the tide?
Lift! O lift, thou lowering sky;
An thou wilt thy gloom forgo!
An thou wilt not, he and I Need not part for drifts of snow

M [within]. Lift! no thou lowering sky thou wilt not lift—

Thy motto readeth "Never" Children. Here they are!

Here are the nails! and may we help?

J You shall

If I should want help.

1st Child. Will you want it then?

Please want it—we like nailing

2nd Child. Yes, we do.

J It seems I ought to want it hold the bough,

And each may nail in turn.

[Sings]

Like a daisy I was, near him growing;

Must I move because favours flag

And be like a brown wallflower blowing

Far out of reach in a crag?

AFTERNOON AT A PARSONAGE

Lift! O lift, thou lowering sky,
An thou canst, thy blue regain!
An thou canst not, he and I Need not part for drops of rain

1st Child Now, have we nailed enough?

J [trains the creepers] Yes, you may go, But do not play too near the churchyard path

M [within] Even misfortune does not strike so near

As my dependence O, in youth and strength

To sit a timid coward in the dark,
And feel before I set a cautious step!
It is so very dark, so far more dark Than any night that day comes after—night In which there would be stars, or else at least

The silvered portion of a sombre cloud Through which the moon is plunging

J [entering] Merton!

M Yes

J Dear Merton, did you know that I could hear?

M No e'en my solitude is not mine
now,

And if I be alone is oft-times doubt Alas! far more than eyesight have I lost, For manly courage drifteth after it—

Even as a splintered spar would drift away From some dunnasted wreck. Hear I complain—

Like a weak ailing woman I complain.

J For the first time.

M I cannot bear the dark.

J My brother! you do bear it—bear it well—

Have borne it twelve long months, and not complained.

Comfort your heart with music all the air Is warm with sunbeams where the organ stands.

You like to feel them on you. Come and play

M My fate, my fate is lonely!

J So it is—

I know it is.

M And pity breaks my heart.

J Does it, dear Merton?

M Yes I say it does.

What! do you think I am so dull of ear
That I can mark no changes in the tones That reach me? Once I liked not girlish pride

And that coy quiet, chary of reply
That held me distant now the sweetest lips Open to entertain me—fairest hands Are proffered me to guide.

J That is not well?

1 AFTERNOON AT A PARSONAGE

M No give me coldness, pride, or still disdain,
Gentle withdrawal Give me anything
But this—a tearless, sweet, confiding ease, Whereof I may expect, I may exact, Considerate care and have it—gentle speech,
And have it Give me anything but this!
For they who give it, give it in the faith That I will not misdeem them, and forget
My doom so far as to perceive thereby Hope of a wife They make this thought too plain,
They wound me—O they cut me to the heart!
When have I said to any one of them, “I am a blind and desolate man,—come here, I pray you—be as eyes to me?” When
said,
Even to her whose pitying voice is sweet
To my dark ruined heart, as must be hands That clasp a lifelong captive’s through the grate,
And who will ever lend her delicate aid To guide me, dark incumbrance that I am!— When have I said to her, “Comforting voice,”

AFTERNOON AT A PARSONAGE

Belonging to a face unknown I pray Be my wife's voice!"

J Never my brother—no
You never have!

M What could she think of me
If I forgot myself so far? or what Could she reply?

J You ask not as men ask Who care for an opinion else perhaps, Although I am not sure—although per haps,
I have no right to give one—I should say She would reply "I will!"

Afterthought

Man dwells apart, though not alone,
He walks among his peers unread
The best of thoughts which he hath known For lack of listeners are not said.

Yet dreaming on earth's clustered isles,
He saith, They dwell not lone like men Forgetful that their sunflecked smiles Flash far beyond each other's ken."

He looks on God's eternal suns That sprinkle the celestial blue And saith Ah! happy shining ones, I would that men were grouped like you!"

• AFTERNOON AT A PARSONAGE

Yet this is sure the loveliest star That clustered with its peers we see,
Only because from us so far Doth near its fellows seem to be.

Songs of Seven

SEVEN TIMES ONE. EXULTATION

There's no dew left on the daisies and clover

There's no rain left in heaven
I've said my "seven times" over and over Seven times one are seven.

I am old, so old, I can write a letter
 My birthday lessons are done
The lambs play always, they know no better
They are only one times one.

O moon! in the night I have seen you sailing
And shining so round and low You were bright! ah bright! but your light is falling—
You are nothing but a bow

You moon, have you done something wrong in heaven
That God has hidden your face?

SONGS OF SEVEN

I hope if you have you will soon be forgiven,
And shine again in your place

O velvet bee, you're a dusty fellow, You've powdered your legs with gold!
O brave marsh marybuds, rich and yellow,
Give me your money to hold!

O columbine, open your folded wrapper,
Where two twin turtle-doves dwell!
O cuckoopint, toll me the purple clapper
That hangs in your clear green bell!

And show me your nest with the young ones in it,
I will not steal them away,
I am old! you may trust me, linnet, linnet—
I am seven times one to-day

SEVEN TIMES TWO ROMANCE

You bells in the steeple, ring, ring out your changes,
How many soever they be,
And let the brown meadow-lark's note as he ranges
Come over, come over to me

SONGS OF SEVEN

Yet birds clearest carol by fall or by swelling
No magical sense conveys And bells have forgotten their old art of telling
The fortune of future days.

Turn again turn again "once they rang cheerily
While a boy listened alone Made his heart yearn again nursing so wearily
All by himself on a stone.

Poor bells! I forgive you your good days are over
And mune, they are yet to be No listening no longing shall aught, aught discover
You leave the story to me.

The foxglove shoots out of the green matted heather Preparing her hoods of snow
She was idle and slept till the sunshiny weather
O children take long to grow

SONGS OF SEVEN

I wish, and I wish that the spring would go faster,
Nor long summer bide so late,
And I could grow on like the foxglove and aster,
For some things are ill to wait

I wait for the day when dear hearts shall discover,
While dear hands are laid on my head,
"The child is a woman, the book may close over,
For all the lessons are said "

I wait for my story—the birds cannot sing it,
Not one, as he sits on the tree,
The bells cannot ring it, but long years,
O bring it!
Such as I wish it to be

SEVEN TIMES THREE LOVE

I leaned out of window, I smelt the white clover
Dark, dark was the garden, I saw not the gate,

SONGS OF SEVEN

Now if there be footsteps he comes, my one lover—

Hush nightingale hush! O sweet nightingale, wait

Till I listen and hear

If a step draweth near

For my love he is late!

The skies in the darkness stoop nearer and nearer

A cluster of stars hangs like fruit in the tree

The fall of the water comes sweeter comes clearer

To what art thou listening and what dost thou see?

Let the star-clusters grow

Let the sweet waters flow

And cross quickly to me.

You night moths that hover where honey brims over

From sycamore blossoms, or settle or sleep

You glowworms shine out and the pathway discover

To him that comes darkling along the rough steep.

Ah, my sailor, make haste,
For the time runs to waste,
And my love lieth deep—

“Too deep for swift telling, and yet, my one lover,
I’ve conned thee an answer, it waits thee to-night ”
By the sycamore passed he, and through the white clover, Then all the sweet speech I had fashioned took flight,
But I’ll love him more, more Than e’er wife loved before,
Be the days dark or bright

SEVEN TIMES FOUR MATERNITY

Heigh ho! daisies and buttercups,
Fair yellow daffodils, stately and tall!
When the wind wakes how they rock in the grasses,
And dance with the cuckoo-buds slender and small!
Here’s two bonny boys, and here’s mother’s own lasses,
Eager to gather them all

Heigh ho! daisies and buttercups!

Mother shall thread them a daisy chain Sing them a song of the pretty hedge sparrow

That loved her brown little ones loved them full fain

Sing Heart, thou art wide though the house be but narrow"—

Sing once, and sing it again.

Heigh ho! daisies and buttercups

Sweet wagging cowslips, they bend and they bow;

A ship sails afar over warm ocean waters,
And haply one musing doth stand at her prow

O bonny brown sons and O sweet little daughters,

Maybe he thinks on you now!

Heigh ho! daisies and buttercups,

Fair yellow daffodils, stately and tall—

A sunshiny world full of laughter and leisure

And fresh hearts unconscious of sorrow and thrall!

Send down on their pleasure smiles passing its measure

God that is over us all!

SEVEN TIMES FIVE WIDOWHOOD

I sleep and rest, my heart makes moan Before I am well awake,
Let me bleed! O let me alone,
Since I must not break.

For children wake, though fathers sleep
With a stone at foot and at head.
O sleepless God, for ever keep,
Keep both living and dead!

I lift mine eyes, and what to see
But a world happy and fair!
I have not wished it to mourn with me—Comfort is not there

O what anear but golden brooms,
And a waste of reedy rills!
O what afar but the fine glooms
On the rare blue hills!

I shall not die, but live forlore—How bitter it is to part!
O to meet thee, my love, once more!
O my heart, my heart!

No more to hear, no more to see!
O that an echo might wake And waft one note of thy psalm to me Ere my heart-strings break!

I should know it how faint soe'er
And with angel voices blent
O once to feel thy spirit anear
I could be content!

Or once between the gates of gold While an entering angel trod,
But once—thou sitting to behold
On the hills of God!

SEVEN TIMES SIX. GIVING IN MARRIAGE

To bear to nurse to rear
To watch, and then to lose
To see my bright ones disappear Drawn' up like morning dew—
To bear to nurse, to rear
To watch and then to lose Thus have I done when God drew near Among his own to choose.

To hear to heed, to wed,
And with thy lord depart
No tears that he as soon as shed Will let no longer smart—
To hear to heed, to wed,
This while thou didst I smiled For now it was not God who said Mother give me thy child.

SONGS OF SEVEN

O fond, O fool, and blind,
To God I gave with tears,
But when a man like grace would find,
My soul put by her fears—
O fond, O fool, and blind,
God guards in happier spheres,
That man will guard where he did bind Is hope for unknown years

To hear, to heed, to wed,
Fair lot that maidens choose,
Thy mother's tenderest words are said, Thy face no more she views, Thy mother's lot, my dear,
She doth in nought accuse,
Her lot to bear, to nurse, to rear,
To love—and then to lose

SILVEN TIMLS SEVLN LONGING FOR HOML

1

A song of a boat —
There was once a boat on a billow Lightly she rocked to her port remote,
And the foam was white in her wake like snow,
And her frail mast bowed when the breeze would blow
And bent like a wand of willow.

II

I shaded mine eyes one day when a boat Went curtseying over the billow
I marked her course till a dancing mote
She faded out on the moonlit foam
And I stayed behind in the dear loved home And my thoughts all day were about the boat
And my dreams upon the pillow

III

I pray you hear my song of a boat,
For it is but short —
My boat you shall find none fairer afloat
In river or port.
Long I looked out for the lad she bore
On the open desolate sea,
And I think he sailed to the heavenly shore,
For he came not back to me—
Ah me!

A song of a nest —
There was once a nest in a hollow Down in the mosses and knot grass pressed,
Soft and warm, and full to the brim—Vetches leaned over it purple and dim With buttercup buds to follow

I pray you hear my song of a nest,
For it is not long —
You shall never light, in a summer quest
The bushes among—
Shall never light on a prouder sitter,
A fairer nestful, nor ever know
A softer sound than their tender twitter, That wind-like did come and go

vi

I had a nestful once of my own,
Ah happy, happy I!
Right dearly I loved them but when they were grown
They spread out their wings to fly—O, one after one they flew away Far up to the heavenly blue,
To the better country, the upper day,
And—I wish I was going too

vii

I pray you, what is the nest to me,
My empty nest?
And what is the shore where I stood to see
My boat sail down to the west?

SONGS OF SEVEN

Can I call that home where I anchor yet, Though my good man has sailed?

Can I call that home where my nest was set,

Now all its hope hath failed?

Nay but the port where my sailor went,
And the land where my nestlings be

There is the home where my thoughts are sent

The only home for me—

Ah no!

A Cottage in a Chine

We reached the place by night,
And heard the waves breaking
They came to meet us with candles alight To show the path we were taking A myrtle, trained on the gate, was white With tufted flowers down shaking

With head beneath her wing,
A little wren was sleeping—
So near, I had found it an easy thing To steal her for my keeping From the myrtle bough that with easy swing
Across the path was sweeping

Down rocky steps rough-hewed,
Where cup-mosses flowered,
And under the trees, all twisted and rude, Wherewith the dell was dowered,
They led us, where deep in its solitude Lay the cottage, leaf-embowered

The thatch was all bespread
With climbing passion flowers They were wet and glistened with rain drops shed
That day in genial showers Was never a sweeter nest " we said Than this little nest of ours."

We laid us down to sleep
But as for me—waking
I marked the plunge of the muffled deep On its sandy reaches breaking For heart joyance doth sometimes keep From slumber like heart-aching

And I was glad that night
With no reason ready To give my own heart for its deep delight That flowed like some tidal eddy
Or shone like a star that was rising bright With comforting radiance steady

But on a sudden—hark!
Music struck asunder Those meshes of bliss and I wept in the dark,
So sweet was the unseen wonder
So swiftly it touched, as if struck at a mark
The trouble that joy kept under

rose—the moon outshone I saw the sea heaving, and a little vessel sailing alone,
The small crisp wavelet cleaving,
'Twas she as she sailed to her port unknown—
Was that track of sweetness leaving

We know they music made In heaven, ere man's creation, But when God threw it down to us that strayed,
It dropt with lamentation,
And ever since doth its sweetness shade With sighs for its first station

Its joy suggests regret—Its most for more is yearning, And it brings to the soul that its voice hath met,
No rest that cadence learning,
But a conscious part in the sighs that fret Its nature for returning

O Eve, sweet Eve! methought
When sometimes comfort winning,
As she watched the first children's tender sport,
Sole joy born since her sinning,

A COTTAGE IN A CHINE

If a bird anear them sang it brought The pang as at beginning

While swam the unshed tear
Her prattlers little heeding Would murmur This bird, with its carol clear
When the red clay was kneaden
And God made Adam our father dear Sang to him thus in Eden."

The moon went in—the sky
And earth and sea hiding
I laid me down with the yearning sigh
Of that strain in my heart abiding I slept, and the barque that had sailed so nigh
In my dream was ever gliding

I slept, but waked amazed,
With sudden noise frighted
And voices without and a flash that dazed My eyes from candles lighted.
Ah! surely "methought, by these shouts upraised,
Some travellers are benighted."

A voice was at my side—
Waken madam waken!

The long-prayed-for ship at her anchor doth ride

Let the child from its rest be taken, For the captain doth weary for babe and for bride—

Waken, madam, waken!

“The home you left but late,
He speeds to it light-hearted,
By the wires he sent this news, and straight To you with it they started ”
O joy for a yearning heart too great,
O union for the parted!

We rose up in the night,
The morning star was shining,
We carried the child in its slumber light Out by the myrtles twining Orion over the sea hung bright,
And glorious in declining

Mother, to meet her son, Smiled first, then wept the rather
And wife, to bind up those links undone,
And cherished words to gather,
And to show the face of her little one,
That had never seen its father

That cottage in a chine,
We were not to behold it,

A COTTAGE IN A CHINE

But there may the purest of sunbeams
shine,
May freshest flowers enfold it For sake of the news which our hearts must twine
With the bower where we were told it!

Now oft left lone again Sit mother and sit daughter And bless the good ship that sailed over the main,
And the favouring winds that brought
her While still some new beauty they fable and feign
For the cottage by the water

Persephone

WRITTEN FOR "THE PORTFOLIO SOCIETY",
JANUARY, 1862

Subject given—"Light and Shade"

She stepped upon Sicilian grass, Demeter's daughter fresh and fair,
A child of light, a radiant lass,
And gamesome as the morning air
The daffodils were fair to see,
They nodded lightly on the lea,
Persephone—Persephone!

Lo! one she marked of rarer growth Than orchis or anemone,
For it the maiden left them both,
And parted from her company Drawn nigh she deemed it fairer still,
And stooped to gather by the rill
The daffodil, the daffodil

What ailed the meadow that it shook?
What ailed the air of Sicily?

PERSEPHONE

She wondered by the brattling brook,
And trembled with the trembling lea.
The coal-black horses rise—they rise O mother mother!" low she cries—
Persephone—Persephone!

O fight, light light!" she cries, farewell

The coal-black horses wait for me.
O shade of shades where I must dwell Demeter mother far from thee!
Ah fated doom that I fulfil!
Ah fateful flower beside the rill!
The daffodil the daffodil!"

What ails her that she comes not home?
Demeter seeks her far and wide,
And gloomy-browed doth ceaseless roam
From many a morn till eventide.
My life, immortal though it be,
Is nought" she cries, for want of
thee,
Persephone—Persephone!

Meadows of Enna let the rain
No longer drop to feed your rills, Nor dew refresh the fields again
With all their nodding daffodils!
Fade, fade and droop O lilied lea

Where thou, dear heart, wert rent from me -
Persephone—Persephone !”

She reigns upon her dusky throne,
 'Mid shades of heroes dread to see,
Among the dead she breathes alone,
 Persephone—Persephone !
Or seated on the Elysian hill She dreams of earthly daylight still,
And murmurs of the daffodil

A voice in Hades soundeth clear,
 The shadows mourn and flit below ,
It cries—“Thou Lord of Hades, hear,
 And let Demeter's daughter go
The tender corn upon the lea Droops in her goddess gloom when she Cries for her lost Persephone

“From land to land she raging flies,
 The green fruit falleth in her wake,
And harvest fields beneath her eyes
 To earth the grain unripened shake Arise, and set the maiden free, Why should the world such sorrow dree
By reason of Persephone?”

He takes the cleft pomegranate seeds “Love, eat with me this parting day,”

PERSEPHONE

Then bids them fetch the coal-black steeds—

Demeter's daughter wouldst away?"
The gates of Hades set her free She will return full soon " saith he—My wife, my wife Persephone."

Low laughs the dark king on his throne—
I gave her of pomegranate seeds."
Demeter's daughter stands alone Upon the fair Eleusian meads.
Her mother meets her Hail! saith she—
And doth our daylight dazzle thee,
My love my child Persephone?

What moved thee daughter to forsake Thy fellow-maids that fatal morn And give thy dark lord power to take Thee living to his realm forlorn?"
Her lips reply without her will.
As one addressed who slumbereth still—
The daffodil the daffodil!"

Her eyelids droop with light oppressed,
And sunny wafts that round her stir Her cheek upon her mother's breast—Demeter's kisses comfort her Calm Queen of Hades, art thou she Who stepped so lightly on the lea—Persephone Persephone?

PERSEPHONE

When, in her destined course, the moon
Meets the deep shadow of this world,
And labouring on doth seem to swoon Through awful wastes of dimness whirled—

Emerged at length, no trace hath she
Of that dark hour of destiny,
Still silvery sweet—Persephone

The greater world may near the less,
And draw it through her weltering shade,
But not one bidding trace impress Of all the darkness that she made The greater soul that draweth thee Hath left his shadow print to see On thy fair face, Persephone!

Demeter sighs, but sure 'tis well
The wife should love her destiny
They part, and yet, as legends tell,
She mourns her lost Persephone, While chant the maids of Enna still—“O fateful flower beside the rill—
The daffodil, the daffodil!”

A Sea Song

Old Albion sat on a crag of late And sung out— Ahoy! ahoy!
Long life to the captain good luck to the mate,
And this to my sailor boy!
Come over come home,
Through the salt sea foam
My sailor my sailor boy

Here's a crown to be given away I ween
A crown for my sailor's head
And all for the worth of a widowed queen And the love of the noble dead
And the fear and fame
Of the island's name
Where my boy was born and bred.

Content thee, content thee let it alone Thou marked for a choice so rare Though treaties be treaties, never a throne Was proffered for cause as fair Yet come to me home,
Through the salt sea foam
For the Greek must ask elsewhere.

A SEA SONG

" 'Tis pity, my sailor, but who can tell?
Many lands they look to me,
One of these might be wanting a Prince as well,
But that's as hereafter may be "
She raised her white head And laughed, and she said
" That's as hereafter may be "

Brothers, and a Sermon

It was a village built in a green rent Between two cliffs that skirt the dangerous bay

A reef of level rock runs out to sea,
And you may lie on it and look sheer down Just where the Grace of Sunderland was lost

And see the elastic banners of the dulse Rock softly and the orange star-fish creep Across the laver and the mackerel shoot Over and under it like silver boats Turning at will and plying under water

There on that reef we lay upon our breasts
My brother and I and half the village lads
For an old fisherman had called to us With "Sirs, the syle be come." And what are they?

My brother said. Good lack! the old man cried

And shook his head to think you gentle-folk

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

Should ask what syle be! Look you, I can't say What syle be called in your fine dictionaries
Nor what name God Almighty calls them
by When their food's ready and He sends them south,
But our folk call them syle, and nought but syle,
And when they're grown, why then we call them herring
I tell you, Sir, the water is as full
Of them as pastures be of blades of grass, You'll draw a score out in a landing net,
And none of them be longer than a pin

"Syle! ay, indeed, we should be badly off, I reckon, and so would God Almighty's gulls,"

He grumbled on in his quaint pety,
"And all his other birds, if He should say I will not drive my syle into the south,
The fisher folk may do without my syle,
And do without the shoals of fish it draws To follow and feed on it"

This said, we made Our peace with him by means of two small coins,

And down we ran and lay upon the reef,

And saw the swimming infants emerald green

In separate shoals, the scarcely turning ebb

Bringing them in white sleek, and not intent

On chase but taking that which came to hand,

The full fed mackerel and the gurnet swam Between and settling on the polished sea
A thousand snow white gulls sat lovingly In social rings, and twittered while they fed,

The village dogs and ours, close and brave, Lay looking over barking at the fish Fast, fast the silver creatures took the bait, And when they heaved and floundered on the rock,

In beauteous misery a sudden pat Some shaggy pup would deal then back
away

At distance eye them with sagacious doubt And shrink half frightened from the slippery things.

And so we lay from ebb-tide, till the flow Rose high enough to drive us from the reef;

The fisher lads went home across the sand

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

We climbed the cliff, and sat an hour or
more,

Talking and looking down It was not talk

Of much significance, except for this—

That we had more in common than of old,

For both were tired, I with overwork,

He with inaction, I was glad it heart

To rest, and he was glad to have an ear

That he could grumble to, and half in jest

Roll at entails, deplore the fate of heirs,

And the misfortune of a good estate—

Misfortune that was sure to pull him down,

Make him a dreamy, selfish, useless man

Indeed he felt himself deteriorate

Already Thereupon he sent down showers

Of clattering stones, to emphasize his words

And leap the cliffs and tumble noisily

Into the seething wave And as for me

I ruled it him and at ingratitude,

While rifling of the basket he had slung

Across his shoulders, then with right good will

We fell to work and feasted like the gods,

Like labourers, or like eager workhouse

At Yuletide dinner, or, to say the whole

At once, like tired, hungry, filthy youth,

Until the meal being o'er, the tilted flask

BROTHERS AND A SERMON

Drained of its latest drop the meat and bread

And ruddy cherries eaten and the dogs Mumbling the bones this elder brother of mine—

This man that never felt an ache or pain In his broad, well knitted frame and never knew

The trouble of an unforgiven grudge
The sting of a regretted meanness, nor The desperate struggle of the unendowed For place and for possession—he began To sing a rhyme that he himself had wrought

Sending it out with cogitative pause, As if the scene where he had shaped it first

Had rolled it back on him, and meeting it Thus unaware, he was of doubtful mind Whether his dignity it well becomed
To sing of pretty maiden

Goldilocks sat on the grass, Tying up of posies rare;
Hardly could a sunbeam pass Through the cloud that was her hair Purple orchids lasteth long Primrose flowers are pale and clear;
O the maiden sang a song
It would do you good to hear!

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

Sad before her leaned the boy,
"Goldilocks that I love well, Happy creature fair and coy, Think o' me, Sweet Amabel" Goldilocks she shook apart, Looked with doubtful, doubtful eyes,
Like a blossom in her heart Opened out her first surprise

As a gloriole sign o' grace, Goldilocks, ah tall and flow,
On the blooming, childlike face, Dimple, dimple, come and go Give her time, on grass and sky Let her gaze if she be fain
As they looked ere he drew nigh,
They will never look again

Ah! the playtime she has known,
While her goldilocks grew long,
Is it like a nestling flown,
Childhood over like a song?
Yes, the boy may clear his brow,
Though she thinks to say him nay,
When she sighs, "I cannot now—Come again some other day"

"Hold! there," he cried, half angry with himself,
"That ending goes amiss" then turned again

BROTHERS AND A SERMON

To the old argument that we had held—Now look you!" said my brother you may talk
Till weary of the talk, I answer Ay There's reason in your words and you
may talk
Till I go on to say This should be so
And you may talk till I shall further own
It is so yes, I am a lucky dog!
Yet not the less shall I next morning wake,
And with a natural and fervent sigh
Such as you never heaved, I shall exclaim What an unlucky dog I am! And
here
He broke into a laugh But as for
you—
You! on all hands you have the best of
me
Men have not robbed you of your birthright—work,
Nor ravaged in old days a peaceful held Nor wedded heiresses against their will Nor sinned, nor slaved nor stooped, nor overreached
That you might drone a useless life away Mid half a score of bleak and barren farms
And half a dozen bogs."

O rare!" I cried

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

"His wrongs go nigh to make him eloquent

Now we behold how far bad actions reach!
Because five hundred years ago a Knight Drove geese and beeves out of a Franklin's yard,

Because three hundred years ago a squire—

Against her will, and for her fair estate—Married a very ugly, red-haired maid,

The blest inheritor of all their pelf,

While in the full enjoyment of the same,

Sighs on his own confession every day

He cracks no egg without a moral sigh,

Nor eats of beef but thinking on that wrong;

Then, yet the more to be revenged on them,

And shame their ancient pride, if they should know,

Works hard as any horse for his degree,
And takes to writing verses "

"Ay," he said,
Half laughing at himself "Yet you and I,

But for those tresses which enrich us yet With somewhat of the hue that partial fame

Calls auburn when it shines on heads of heirs,

BROTHERS AND A SERMON .

But when it flames round brows of younger sons,
Just red—mere red why but for this I say
And but for selfish getting of the land And beggarly entalling it, we two To-day well fed, well grown well dressed well read
We might have been two horny-handed boors—
Lean clumsy ignorant, and rugged
boors—
Planning for moonlight nights a poaching scheme,
Or souling our dull souls and consciences
With plans for pilfering a cottage roost.

What chorus! are you dumb? you should have cried So good comes out of evil " and with that,
As if all pauses it was natural To seize for songs, his voice broke out again

Coo dove, to thy married mate—
She has two warm eggs in her nest Tell her the hours are few to wait Ere life shall dawn on their rest;
And thy young shall peck at the shells, elate
With a dream of her brooding breast.

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

Coo, dove, for she counts the hours,
Her fair wings ache for flight
By day the apple has grown in the flowers,
And the moon has grown by night,
And the white drift settled from hawthorn
bowers,
Yet they will not seek the light

Coo, dove, but what of the sky?
And what if the storm-wind swell, And the reeling branch come down from on
high
To the grass where daisies dwell,
And the brood beloved should with them lie Or ever they break the shell?

Coo, dove, and yet black clouds lower,
Like fate, on the far-off sea Thunder and wind they bear to thy bower,
As on wings of destiny
Ah, what if they break in an evil hour,
As they broke over mine and me?

What next?—we started like to girls, for lo!
The creaking voice, more harsh than rusty crane,
Of one who stooped behind us, cried aloud, “Good luck! how sweet the gentleman does sing—

So loud and sweet tis like to split his throat.

Why Mike s a child to him a two-years child—

A Chrism child."

Who s Mike?" my brother growled
A little roughly Quoth the fisherman—

Mike, Sir? he s just a fisher lad no
more

But he can sing when he takes on to sing

So loud there s not a sparrow in the spire But needs must hear Sir if I might make bold

I d ask what song that was you sung
My mate

As we were shoving off the mackerel boats
Said he I ll wager that s the sort o song They kept their hearts up with in the Crimea. "

There, fisherman " quoth I he showed his wit

Your mate; he marked the sound of sa vage war—

Gunpowder groans hot shot, and burst ing shells,

And murderous messages delivered by Spent balls that break the heads of dreaming men."

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

"Ay, ay, Sir!" quoth the fisherman
'Have done!'"

My brother And I—"The gift belongs to few

Of sending farther than the words can reach

Their spirit and expression," still—"Have done!"

He cried, and then, "I rolled the rubbish
out

More loudly than the meaning warranted, To air my lungs—I thought not on the
words "

Then said the fisherman, who missed the point,

"So Mike rolls out the psalm, you'll hear him, Sir,

Please God you live till Sunday "

"Even so
And you, too, fisherman, for here, they say, You all are church-goers "

"Surely, Sir," quoth he, Took off his hat, and stroked his old white head

And wrinkled face, then sitting by us
said,

As one that utters with a quiet mind Unchallenged truth—"Tis lucky for the boats "

The boats! 'tis lucky for the boats! Our eyes

Were drawn to him as either fain would say

What! do they send the psalm up in the spire

And pray because 'tis lucky for the boats?

But he, the brown old man the wrinkled man

That all his life had been a church-goer Familiar with celestial cadences

Informed of all he could receive and sure Of all he understood—he sat content

And we kept silence. In his reverend
face

There was a simpleness we could not sound

Much truth had passed him overhead; some error

He had trod under foot—God comfort
him!

He could not learn of us for we were young

And he was old and so we gave it up

And the sun went into the west, and down

Upon the water stooped an orange cloud,

And the pale milky reaches flushed as glad

To wear its colours and the sultry air

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

Went out to sea, and puffed the sails of ships

With thymy wafts, the breath of trodden
grass

It took moreover music, for across
The heather belt and over pasture land Came the sweet monotone of one slow bell,
And parted time into divisions rare, Whereof each morsel brought its own de-
light

“They ring for service,” quoth the fisherman,

“Our parson preaches in the church tonight ”

“And do the people go?” my brother asked

“Ay, Sir, they count it mean to stay away,

He takes it so to heart He’s a rare man, Our parson, half a head above us all ”

“That’s a great gift, and notable,” said I “Ay, Sir, and when he was a younger man

He went out in the lifeboat very oft,

BROTHERS AND A SERMON

Before the Grace of Sunderland was wrecked.

He's never been his own man since that hour

For there were thirty men aboard of her Anigh as close as you are now to me
And neer a one was saved.

They're lying now With two small children in a row the church

And yard are full of seamen's graves, and few

Have any names.

She bumped upon the reef Our parson, my young son and several
more

Were lashed together with a two-inch rope

And crept along to her their mates ashore Ready to haul them in. The gale was high

The sea was all a boillog seething froth, And God Almighty's guns were going off

And the land trembled.

When she took the ground,
She went to pieces like a lock of hay Tossed from a pitchfork. Ere it came to that

The captain reeled on deck with two small things,
One in each arm—his little lad and lass Their hair was long, and blew before his
face,
Or else we thought he had been saved,
he fell,
But held them fast The crew, poor luckless souls!
The breakers licked them off, and some were crushed,
Some swallowed in the yeast, some flung up dead,
The dear breath beaten out of them not
one Jumped from the wreck upon the reef to catch
The hands that strained to reach, but tumbled back
With eyes wide open But the captain
lay
And clung—the only man alive They prayed—‘For God’s sake, captain, throw the children here!’ ‘Throw them!’ our parson cried, and then she struck ‘
And he threw one, a pretty two-years
child,

BROTHERS AND A SERMON

But the gale dashed him on the slippery verge
And down he went. They say they heard him cry

Then he rose up and took the other one,
And all our men reached out their hungry arms
And cried out Throw her throw her!
and he did
He threw her right against the parson's
breast,
And all at once a sea broke over them And they that saw it from the shore have
said
It struck the wreck and ploccment scat tered it
Just as a woman might the lump of salt That twist her hands into the kneading pan
She breaks and crumbles on her rising bread.

We hauled our men in two of them were dead—
The sea had beaten them their heads hung down
Our parson's arms were empty for the wave
Had torn away the pretty pretty lamb

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

We often see him stand beside her grave But 't was no fault of his, no fault of his

"I ask your pardon, Sirs, I prate and prate,
And never have I said what brought me
here
Sirs, if you want a boat to-morrow morn, I'm bold to say there's ne'er a boat like
mine "

"Ay, that was what we wanted," we replied,
"A boat, his boat," and off he went, well pleased

We, too, rose up (the crimson in the sky Flushing our faces), and went sauntering on,
And thought to reach our lodging, by the cliff
And up and down among the heather beds,
And up and down between the sheaves, we sped,
Doubling and winding, for a long ravine Ran up into the land and cut us off, Pushing out slippery ledges for the birds, And rent with many a crevice, where the wind

BROTHERS AND A SERMON

Had laid up drifts of empty eggshells, swept
From the bare berths of gulls and guillemots.

So as it chanced we lighted on a path
That led into a nutwood and our talk Was louder than becometh if we had known

With argument and laughter for the path

As we sped onward took a sudden turn Abrupt and we came out on churchyard
grass

And close upon a porch and face to face With those within and with the thirty graves.

We heard the voice of one who preached within,

And stopped. "Come on" my brother whispered me

It were more decent that we enter now Come on! we'll hear this rare old demi
god

I like strong men and large I like grey heads

And grand gruff voices, hoarse though this may be

With shouting in the storm."

It was not hoarse

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

The voice that preached to those few fishermen
And women, nursing mothers with the babes Hushed on their breasts, and yet it held them not Then drowsy eyes were drawn to look at
us,
Till, having leaned our rods against the wall,
And left the dogs at watch, we entered, sat,
And were apprised that, though he saw us not,
The parson knew that he had lost the
eyes
And ears of those before him, for he made A pause—a long dead pause—and dropped his arms,
And stood awaiting, till I felt the red Mount to my brow
And a soft fluttering stir Passed over all, and every mother hushed The babe beneath her shawl, and he turned round
And met our eyes, unused to diffidence,
But diffident of his, then with a sigh Fronted the folk, lifted his grand grey
head,
And said, as one that pondered now the words

BROTHERS AND A SERMON

He had been preaching on with new surprise
And found fresh marvel in their sound Behold!
Behold! saith He I stand at the door and knock."

Then said the parson What! and shall He wait
And must He wait, not only till we say Good Lord the house is clean, the hearth is swept
The children sleep the mackerel boats are in
And all the nets are mended therefore I Will slowly to the door and open it But must He also wait where still behold!
He stands and knocks, while we do say
Good Lord
The gentlefolk are come to worship here
And I will up and open to Thee soon
But first I pray a little longer wait For I am taken up with them my eyes Must needs regard the fashion of their clothes,
And count the gains I think to make by them
Forsooth they are of much account good Lord!

BROTHERS, AND A

Therefore have patience with dear Lord!

Or come again?"

"What! must He wait
For this? Ay, He doth wait
still,

Waiting for this, He, patient Waiting for this, e'en this
'Behold'

I stand at the door and knock

"O f Knocking and waiting—knock
night

When work is done! I charge
the sea

Whereby you fill your children and by

The might of Him that maketh men!

I charge you, mothers! by milk

He drew, and by His Father, Blessèd for ever, that ye answer Open the door with shame,
sinned,

If ye be sorry, open it with Albeit the place be bare for And comfortless for lack of peace Be not abashed for that, but

And take Him in that comes to sup with thee

Behold! He saith I stand at the door and knock.

Now hear me there be troubles in this world

That no man can escape, and there is one

That lieth hard and heavy on my soul Concerning that which is to come —

I say
As a man that knows what earthly trouble means,

I will not bear this ONE—I cannot bear This ONE—I cannot bear the weight of
you—

You—every one of you, body and soul You, with the care you suffer and the loss

That you sustain you with the growing up

To perill maybe with the growing old
To want, unless before I stand with you At the great white throne I may be free of all

And utter to the full what shall discharge Mine obligations nay I will not wait A day for every time the black clouds
rise,

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

And the gale freshens, still I search my soul
To find if there be aught that can persuade
To good, or aught forsooth that can beguile
From evil, that I (miserable man)
If that be so) have left unsaid, undone

“So that when any risen from sunken wrecks,
Or rolled in by the billows to the edge Of the everlasting strand, what time the sea Gives up her dead, shall meet me, they may say Never, ‘Old man, you told us not of this,
You left us fisher-lads that had to toil Ever in danger of the secret stab Of rocks, far deadlier than the dagger, winds
Of breath more murderous than the cannon’s, waves
Mighty to rock us to our death, and gulls Ready beneath to suck and swallow us in This crime be on your head, and as for us—
What shall we do?’ but rather—nay, not so,
I will not think it, I will leave the dead

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

Appealing but to life I am afraid Of you, but not so much if you have sinned
As for the doubt if sin shall be forgiven.
The day was, I have been afraid of pride—
Hard man's hard pride but now I am afraid
Of man's humility I counsel you By the great God's great humbleness
and by
His pity be not humble over-much.
See! I will show at whose unopened doors
He stands and knocks, that you may never say
I am too mean too ignorant, too lost to knock at other doors, but not at
mine.

See here! it is the night! it is the
night!
And snow lies thickly white untrodden snow
And the wan moon upon a casement shines—
A casement crusted o'er with frosted leaves,
That makes her ray less bright along the floor

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

A woman sits, with hands upon her
knees,
Poor tired soul! and she has nought to do,
For there is neither fire nor candle light The driftwood ash lies cold upon her hearth,
The rushlight flickered down an hour ago,
Her children wail a little in their sleep For cold and hunger, and, as if that sound
Was not enough, another comes to her,
Over God's undefiled snow—a song—Nay, never hang your heads—I say, a song

“And doth she curse the alehouse, and the sots
That drink the night out and their earnings there,
And drink their manly strength and courage down,
And drink away the little children's bread,
And starve her, starving by the self-same act
Her tender suckling, that with piteous
eyes
Looks in her face, till scarcely she has
heart

BROTHERS AND A SERMON

To work and earn the scanty bit and drop

That feed the others?

Does she curse the song?

I think not fishermen I have not heard

Such women curse. God's curse is curse enough.

To-morrow she will say a bitter thing Pulling her sleeve down lest the bruises show—

A bitter thing but meant for an excuse—

My master is not worse than many men

But now ay now she sitteth dumb and still

No food no comfort, cold and poverty Bearing her down.

My heart is sore for her

How long how long? When troubles come of God

When men are frozen out of work when wives

Are sick, when working fathers fail and die

When boats go down at sea—then nought behoves

Like patience but for troubles wrought of men

Patience is hard—I tell you it is hard.

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

“O thou poor soul! it is the night—the
night,
Against thy door drifts up the silent snow, Blocking thy threshold ‘Fall,’ thou sayest, ‘fall, fall,
Cold snow, and lie and be trod underfoot, Am not I fallen? Wake up, and pipe,
O wind, Dull wind, and beat and bluster at my door Merciful wind, sing me a hoarse rough
song,
For there is other music made to-night That I would fain not hear Wake, thou still sea,
Heavily plunge Shoot on, white waterfall
O, I could long like thy cold icicles Freeze, freeze, and hang upon the frosty clift
And not complain, so I might melt at last
In the warm summer sun, as thou wilt do!”

“‘But woe is me! I think there is no sun, My sun is sunken, and the night grows
dark None care for me The children cry for
bread,
And I have none, and nought can comfort me,

BROTHERS AND A SERMON

Even if the heavens were free to such as I
It were not much for death is long to wait
And heaven is far to go!

And speakst thou thus Despairing of the sun that sets to thee,
And of the earthly love that wanes to
thee,
And of the heaven that lieth far from
thee?
Peace, peace, fond fool! One draweth near thy door
Whose footsteps leave no print across the snow
Thy sun has risen with comfort in his
face,
The smile of heaven to warm thy frozen
heart
And bless with saintly hand. What! is it
long
To wait and far to go? Thou shalt not go Behold across the snow to thee He comes,
Thy heaven descends, and is it long to wait?
Thou shalt not wait This night this night He saith
I stand at the door and knock.

“ It is enough—can such an one be here—Yea, here? O God forgive you, fishermen !

One! is there only one? But do thou
know,

O woman pale for want, if thou art here,
That on thy lot much thought is spent
in heaven,

And, coveting the heart a hard man broke,
One standeth patient, watching in the
night,

And waiting in the day-time

“ What shall be If thou wilt answer? He will smile on
thee,

One smile of His shall be enough to heal

The wound of man's neglect, and He will sigh,

Pitying the trouble which that sigh shall cure,

And He will speak—speak in the desolate
night,

In the dark night ‘For me a thorny
crown

Men wove, and nails were driven in my hands

And feet there was an earthquake, and I died,

I died, and am alive for evermore

BROTHERS AND A SERMON

I died for thee for thee I am alive
And my humanity doth mourn for thee, For thou art mine and all thy little
ones,
They too are mine, are mine. Behold the house
Is dark, but there is brightness where
the sons
Of God are singing and behold the heart
Is troubled yet the nations walk in white They have forgotten how to weep and
thou
Shalt also come, and I will foster thee
And satisfy thy soul and thou shalt warn Thy trembling life beneath the smile of God.
A little while—it is a little while—
A little while and I will comfort thee
I go away but I will come again.

But hear me yet. There was a poor old man
Who sat and listened to the raging sea And heard it thunder lunging at the cliffs
As like to tear them down. He lay at
night
And Lord have mercy on the lads,
said he,

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

'That sailed at noon, though they be none of mine'

For when the gale gets up, and when the wind

Flings at the window, when it beats the roof,

And lulls, and stops, and rouses up
again,

And cuts the crest clean off the plunging
wave,

And scatters it like feathers up the field, Why, then I think of my two lads my
lads

That would have worked and never let me want,

And never let me take the parish pay No, none of mine, my lads were drowned at sea—

My two—before the most of these were born

I know how sharp that cuts, since my poor wife

Walked up and down, and still walked up and down,

And I walked after, and one could not hear

A word the other said, for wind and sea That raged and beat and thundered in the night—

The awfulest, the longest, lightest night

BROTHERS AND A SERMON

That ever parents had to spend—a moon That shone like daylight on the breaking wave.

Ah me! and other men have lost their
lads.

And other women wiped their poor dead mouths

And got them home and dried them in the house

And seen the driftwood lie along the coast

That was a tidy boat but one day back,
And seen next tide the neighbours gather it To lay it on their fires.

Ay I was strong
And able-bodied—loved my work—but now I am a useless hull tis time I sunk
I am in all men's way I trouble them
I am a trouble to myself but yet
I feel for mariners of stormy nights
And feel for wives that watch ashore.

Ay ay!

If I had learning I would pray the Lord
To bring them in but I m no scholar no Book learning is a world too hard for me But I make bold to say O Lord good Lord.

I am a broken-down poor man a fool
To speak to Thee but in the Book
't's writ.

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

As I hear say from others that can read, How, when Thou camest, Thou didst love the sea,

And live with fisherfolk, whereby 'tis sure Thou knowest all the peril they go
through,

And all their trouble

““As for me, good Lord,
I have no boat, I am old, too old—

My lads are drowned, I buried my poor wife,

My little lasses died so long ago

That mostly I forget what they were like

Thou knowest, Lord, they were such little ones

I know they went to Thee, but I forget Their faces, though I missed them sore

““O Lord,
I was a strong man, I have drawn good food

And made good money out of Thy great sea

But yet I cried for them at nights, and
now,

Although I be so old, I miss my lads,
And there be many folk this stormy night Heavy with fear for theirs. Merciful Lord, Comfort them, save their honest boys,
their pride,

BROTHERS AND A SERMON

And let them hear next ebb the blessedest Best sound—the boat keels grating on the sand.

I cannot pray with finer words: I know Nothing I have no learning cannot learn—

Too old, too old. They say I want for
nought,

I have the parish pay but I am dull Of hearlog and the fire scarce warms me through.

God save me—I have been a sinful man—And save the lives of them that still can
work,

For they are good to me ay good to
me.

But Lord, I am a trouble! and I sit And I am lonesome, and the nights are few

That any think to come and draw a chair

And sit in my poor place and talk awhile.
Why should they come, forsooth? Only
the wind

Knocks at my door O long and loud It knocks,

The only thing God made that has a mind

To enter in.

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

“Yea, thus the old man spake These were the last words of his aged mouth—

BUT ONE DID KNOCK One came to sup with him,

That humble, weak old man, knocked at his door

In the rough pauses of the labouring
wind

I tell you that One knocked while it was dark,

Save where their foaming passion had made white

Those livid seething billows What He said

In that poor place where He did talk
awhile,

I cannot tell but this I am assured,

That when the neighbours came the morrow morn,

What time the wind had bated, and the sun Shone on the old man's floor, they saw the smile

He passed away in, and they said, ‘He looks

As he had woke and seen the face of Christ,

And with that rapturous smile held out his arms

To come to Him !’

Can such an one be here
So old so weak so ignorant so frail?
The Lord be good to thee thou poor
old man
It would be hard with thee if heaven were shut
To such as have not learning! Nay nay nay
He condescends to them of low estate To such as are despised He cometh
down,
Stands at the door and knocks.

Yet bear with me.
I have a message I have more to say Shall sorrow win his pity and not sin—That burden ten times heavier to be borne?
What think you? Shall the virtuous have His care Alone? O virtuous women think not scorn
For you may lift your faces everywhere And now that it grows dusk, and I can
see None though they front me straight I fain would tell
A certain thing to you. I say to you And if it doth concern you as methinks
It doth, then surely it concerneth all.

BROTHERS, AND A SERMON

I say that there was once—I say not here—

I say that there was once a castaway,
And she was weeping, weeping bitterly, Kneeling, and crying with a heart-sick
cry

That choked itself in sobs—‘O my good
name’

O my good name!’ And none did hear her cry!

Nay, and it lightened, and the storm-bolts fell,

And the rain splashed upon the roof, and still

She, storm-tost as the storming elements—

She cried with an exceeding bitter cry, ‘O my good name!’ And then the thunder-cloud

Stooped low and burst in darkness over-
head,

And rolled, and rocked her on her knees, and shook

The frail foundations of her dwelling-
place

But she—if any neighbour had come in, (None did) if any neighbours had come in,

They might have seen her crying on her
knees,

And sobbing Lost lost lost! beating her breast—
Her breast for ever pricked with cruel thorns,
The wounds whereof could neither balm assuage
Nor any patience heal—beating her brow Which ached it had been bent so long to hide From level eyes whose meaning was contempt.

O ye good women it is hard to leave
The paths of virtue and return again.
What if this sinner wept and none of
you Comforted her? And what if she did strive
To mend, and none of you believed her strife, Nor looked upon her? Mark, I do not say Though it was hard, you therefore were to blame
That she had aught against you though your feet
Never drew near her door But I beseech
Your patience. Once in old Jerusalem
A woman kneeled at consecrated feet

Kissed them, and washed them with her tears

“What then?”

I think that yet our Lord is pitiful I think I see the castaway e'en now!
And she is not alone the heavy rain Splashes without, and sullen thunder rolls, But she is lying at the sacred feet
Of One transfigured

“And her tears flow down, Down to her lips—her lips that kiss the print

Of nails, and love is like to break her
heart!

Love and repentance—for it still doth

Sore in her soul to think, to think that she,

Even she, did pierce the sacred, sacred
feet,

And bruise the thorn-crowned head

“O Lord, our Lord, How great is Thy compassion! Come,
good Lord,

For we will open Come this night, good Lord,

Stand at the door and knock

“And is this all?— Trouble, old age and simpleness, and sin—

BROTHERS AND A SERMON

This all? It might be all some other
night
But this night if a voice said Give account
Whom hast thou with thee? then must I reply
Young manhood have I beautiful youth and strength,
Rich with all treasure drawn up from the crypt
Where lies the learning of the ancient world—
Brave with all thoughts that poets fling
upon
The strand of life, as driftweed after storms Doubtless familiar with Thy mountain
heads,
And the dread purity of Alpine snows Doubtless familiar with Thy works con-coiled
For ages from mankind—outlying worlds And many mooned spheres—and Thy great store Of stars more thick than mealy dust which here
Powders the pale leaves of Auriculas.

This do I know but Lord I know not
more.

“ ‘ Not more concerning them—concerning
Thee,
I know Thy bounty, where Thou givest much Standing without, if any call Thee in Thou givest more ’ Speak, then, O rich and strong
Open, O happy young, ere yet the hand Of him that knocks, wearied at last, forbear,
The patient foot its thankless quest refrain,
The wounded heart forevermore withdraw ”

I have heard many speak, but this one man—
So anxious not to go to heaven alone—
This one man I remember, and his look, Till twilight overshadowed him He ceased,
And out in darkness with the fisher folk We passed and stumbled over mounds of moss,
And heard, but did not see, the passing beck
Ah, graceless heart, would that it could regain
From the dim storehouse of sensations past

The impress full of tender awe that
 night
Which fell on me! It was as if the Christ
Had been drawn down from heaven to track us home,
And any of the footsteps following us Might have been His.

A Wedding Song

Come up the broad river, the Thames, my Dane,
My Dane with the beautiful eyes!
Thousands and thousands await thee full
fain,
And talk of the wind and the skies Fear not from folk and from country to part,
O, I swear it is wisely done
For (I said) I will bear me by thee, sweet-
heart,
As becometh my father's son

Great London was shouting as I went down
"She is worthy," I said, "of this, What shall I give who have promised a crown?
O, first I will give her a kiss"
So I kissed her and brought her, my Dane, my Dane,
Through the waving wonderful crowd

A WEDDING SONG

Thousands and thousands, they shouted amain

Like mighty thunders and loud.

And they said, He is young the lad we
 love,

The heir of the Isles is young How we deem of his mother and one gone above

Can neither be said nor sung
He brings us a pledge—he will do his part With the best of his race and name "—
And I will, for I look to live sweetheart As may suit with my mother's fame.

The Four
Bridges

I love this grey old church, the low, long nave,

The ivied chancel and the slender spire,
No less its shadow on each heaving grave,
With growing osier bound, or living briar,

I love those yew-tree trunks, where stand arrayed

So many deep-cut names of youth and maid

A simple custom this—I love it well—

A carved betrothal and a pledge of truth, How many an eve, their linked names to spell,

Beneath the yew-trees sat our village youth¹

When work was over, and the new-cut hay

Sent wafts of balm from meadows where it lay

THE FOUR BRIDGES

Ah! many an eve, while I was yet a boy Some village hind has beckoned me
aside,
And sought mine aid, with shy and awkward joy
To carve the letters of his rustic bride And make them clear to read as graven
stone Deep in the yew-tree's trunk beside his own.

For none could carve like me and here they stand Fathers and mothers of this present race And underscored by some less practised
That fain the story of its line would
trace,
With children's names and number and the day When any called to God have passed away

I look upon them and I turn aside As oft when carving them I did ere-while
And there I see those wooden bridges wide That cross the marshy hollow there the stile

THE FOUR BRIDGES

In reeds imbedded, and the swelling down,
And the white road toward the distant town

But those old bridges claim another look Our bratling river tumbles through the
one,

The second spans a shallow, weedy brook,
Beneath the others, and beneath the sun, Lie two long stilly pools, and on their breasts

Picture their wooden piles, encased in swallows' nests

And round about them grows a fringe of reeds,

And then a floating crown of lily flowers,
And yet within small silver-budded weeds, But each clear centre evermore em-
bowers

A deeper sky, where, stooping, you may see

The little minnows darting restlessly

My heart is bitter, lilies, at your sweet, Why did the dewdrop fringe your chalices?

Why in your beauty are you thus complete,

You silver ships—you floating palaces?

THE FOUR BRIDGES

O! if need be, you must allure man's
eye,
Yet wherefore blossom here? O why? O
why?

O! O! the world is wide, you lily flowers, It hath warm forests cleft by still pools,
Where every night bathes crowds of stars and bowers
Of spicery hang over Sweet air cools And shakes the lilies among those stars that lie
Why are not ye content to reign there?
Why?

That chain of bridges, it were hard to tell How it is linked with all my early joy
There was a little foot that I loved well It danced across them when I was a boy
There was a careless voice that used to sing
There was a child a sweet and happy
thing

Oft through that matted wood of oak and birch She came from yonder house upon the hill

THE FOUR BRIDGES

She crossed the wooden bridges to the church,

And watched, with village girls, my boasted skill

But loved to watch the floating lilies best,
Or linger, peering in a swallow's nest,

Linger and linger, with her wistful eyes

Drawn to the lily-buds that lay so white And soft on crimson water, for the skies Would crimson, and the little cloudlets
bright

Would all be flung among the flowers sheer down,

To flush the spaces of their clustering crown

✱

Till the green rushes—O, so glossy green—

The rushes, they would whisper, rustle, shake,

And forth on floating gauze, no jewelled queen

So rich, the green-eyed dragon-flies would break,

And hover on the flowers—aërial things, With little rainbows flickering on their wings

Ah! my heart dear! the polished pools lie still,

Like lanes of water reddened by the west,

THE FOUR BRIDGES

Till swooping down from yon overhang ing hill
The bold marsh harrier wets her tawny
breast
We scared her oft in childhood from her prey
And the old eager thoughts rise fresh as yesterday

To yonder copse by moonlight I did go In luxury of mischief half afraid, To steal the great owl's brood, her downy
snow
Her screaming limbs to seize the while she preyed
With yellow cruel eyes, whose radiant glare Fell with their mother rage, I might not dare.

Panting I lay till her great fanning wings Troubled the dreams of rock-doves slumbering nigh
And she and her fierce mate like evil
things Skipped the dusk fields then rising with a cry
Of fear joy triumph, darted on my prey
And tore it from the nest and fled away

THE FOUR BRIDGES

But afterward, belated in the wood,
I saw her moping on the rifled tree,
And my heart smote me for her, while I stood

Awakened from my careless reverie, So white she looked, with moonlight round her shed,
So motherlike she drooped and hung her
head

O that mine eyes would cheat me! I behold

The godwits running by the water edge,
The mossy bridges mirrored as of old,
The little curlews creeping from the sedge,

But not the little foot so gaily light O that mine eyes would cheat me, that I might!—

Would cheat me! I behold the gable ends—Those purple pigeons clustering on the cote,

The lane with maples overhung, that bends Toward her dwelling, the dry grassy moat,

Thick mullions, diamond latticed, mossed and grey,

And walls banked up with laurel and with bay

And up behind them yellow fields of corn
And still ascending countless fiery spires, Dry slopes of hills uncultured bare for loam
And green in rocky clefts with whins and briars
Then rich cloud masses dyed the violet's hue
With orange sunbeams dropping swiftly
 through.

Ay I behold all this full easily
My soul is jealous of my happier eyes, And manhood envies youth. Oh strange to see
By looking merely orange flooded skies Nay any dewdrop that may near me
 shine:
But never more the face of Eglantine!

She was my one companion being her self
The jewel and adornment of my days, My life's completeness. O a smiling elf That I do but disparage with my praise—My playmate and I loved her dearly and
 long
And she loved me as the tender love the strong

THE FOUR BRIDGES

Ay, but she grew, till on a time there came

A sudden restless yearning to my heart,
And as we went a-nesting, all for shame And shyness, I did hold my peace, and start,
Content departed, comfort shut me out,
And there was nothing left to talk about

She had but sixteen years, and as for me, Four added made my life This pretty
bird,

This fairy bird that I had cherished—she, Content, had sung, while I, contented,
heard

The song had ceased, the bird, with nature's art,
Had brought a thorn and set it in my heart

The restless birth of love my soul opprest,
I longed and wrestled for a tranquil day,
And warred with that disquiet in my breast
As one who knows there is a better way,
But, turned against myself, I still in vain Looked for the ancient calm to come again

My tired soul could to itself confess That she deserved a wiser love than
mine,

THE FOUR BRIDGES

To love more truly were to love her less
And for this truth I still awoke to pine I had a dim belief that it would be A better thing for her a blessed thing for me.

Good hast Thou made them—comforters right sweet;
Good hast Thou made the world, to mankind lent
Good are Thy dropping clouds that feed the wheat
Good are Thy stars above the firmament.
Take to Thee, take, Thy worship Thy renown;
The good which Thou hast made doth wear Thy crown.

For O my God, Thy creatures are so frail
Thy bountiful creation is so fair
That, drawn before us like the temple veil, It hides the Holy Place from thought and care,
Giving man's eyes instead its sweeping fold Rich as with cherub wings and apples wrought of gold,

Purple and blue and scarlet—shimmering
bells

And rare pomegranates on its brodered rim,

Glorious with chain- and fret-work that the swell

Of incense shakes to music dreamy and
dim,

Till on a day comes loss, that God makes gain,

And death and darkness rend the veil in twain

Ah, sweetest! my beloved! each outward thing

Recalls my youth, and is instinct with
thee,

Brown wood-owls in the dusk, with noiseless wing,

Float from yon hanger to their haunted
tree,

And hoot full softly Listening, I regain A flashing thought of thee with their remembered strain

I will not pine—it is the careless brook, These amber sunbeams slanting down the vale,

THE FOUR BRIDGES

It is the long tree-shadows, with their look Of natural peace, that make my heart to fail

The peace of nature—No I will not pine—But O the contrast twixt her face and
mine!

And still I changed—I was a boy no
more

My heart was large enough to hold my kind,

And all the world As hath been oft before With youth I sought, but I could never find

Work hard enough to quiet my self-strife,
And use the strength of action-craving life.

She too, was changed her bountiful sweet
eyes

Looked out full lovingly on all the world.
O tender as the deeps in yonder skies

Their beaming! but her rosebud lips were curled

With the soft dimple of a musing smile, Which kept my gaze, but held me mute the while.

A cast of bees a slowly moving wain
The scent of bean flowers wafted up a dell

THE FOUR BRIDGES

Blue pigeons wheeling over fields of grain, Or bleat of folded lamb, would please her well,
Or cooing of the early coted dove,— She sauntering mused of these, I, following, mused of love

With her two lips, that one the other pressed
So poutingly with such a tranquil air, With her two eyes, that on my own would rest
So dream-like, she denied my silent prayer,
Fronted unuttered words and said them
nay,
And smiled down love till it had nought to say

The words that through mine eyes would clearly shine Hovered and hovered on my lips in vain,
If after pause I said but "Eglantine",
She raised to me her quiet eyelids twain,
And looked me this reply—look calm, yet bland—
"I shall not know, I will not understand "

THE FOUR BRIDGES

Yet she did know my story—knew my life
Was wrought to hers with bindings many and strong
That I like Israel served for a wife And for the love I bare her thought not long
But only a few days, full quickly told My seven years service strict as his of old.

I must be brief the twilight shadows
grow
And steal the rose-bloom genial summer sheds,
And scented wafts of wind that come and go Have lifted dew from honied clover
heads
The seven stars shine but above the mill
The dark delightful woods lie veiled and still.

Hush! hush! the nightingale begins to sing
And stops, as ill-contented with her note Then breaks from out the bush with hurried wing Restless and passionate She tunes her throat

THE FOUR BRIDGES

Laments awhile in wavering trills, and then Floods with a stream of sweetness all the glen

The seven stars upon the nearest pool Lie trembling down betwixt the lily
leaves,
And move like glowworms, wafting breezes cool Come down along the water, and it heaves
And bubbles in the sedge, while deep and wide
The dim night settles on the country side

I know this scene by heart O! once before
I saw the seven stars float to and fro, And stayed my hurried footsteps by the shore

To mark the starry picture spread below
Its silence made the tumult in my breast More audible, its peace revealed my own unrest.

I paused, then hurried on, my heart beat quick,
I crossed the bridges, reached the steep ascent,

THE FOUR BRIDGES

And climbed through matted fern and hazels thick

Then darkling through the close green maples went

And saw—there felt love's keenest pangs begin—

An oriel window lighted from within—

I saw—and felt that they were scarcely cares

Which I had known before I drew rooms near

And O! methought how sore it frets and wears

The soul to part with that it holds so
dear

'Tis hard two woven tendrils to untwine
And I was come to part with Eglantine.

For life was bitter through those words repressed

And youth was burdened with unspoken vows

Love unrequited brooded in my breast

And shrank, at glance, from the beloved brows:

And three long months, heart sick, my foot withdraw'n

I had not sought her side by rivulet copse, or lawn—

THE FOUR BRIDGES

Not ought her self, yet bring the light and
be

Still followed in her wake though far behind,

And I, being parted from her loveliness, Looked at the picture of her in my mind

I lived alone I talked with soul and eye And ever longed for her, and sighed for rest

Then I had risen to struggle with my
heart,

And said—'O heart! the world is fresh and true,

And I am young, but this the real

Changes to but ruins the morning air
I will, I must, these weary letters break—
I will be free, if only for her sake

"O let me trouble her no more with night!
Heart-healing comes by distance, and with time

Then let me wander, and enrich mine eyes
With the green forests of a softer clime, Or list by night at sea the wind's low sustave

And long monotonous rockings of the wave

Through open solitudes unbounded meads
Where, wading on breast-high in yellow bloom,
Untamed of man the shy white llama feeds—
There would I journey and forget my doom
Or far O far as sunrise I would see
The level prairie stretch away from me!

Or I would sail upon the tropic seas, Where fathom long the blood-red dulces
grow Droop from the rock and waver in the breeze, Lashing the tide to foam while calm below
The muddy mandrakes throng those waters warm,
And purple gold, and green the living blossoms swarm."

So of my father I did win consent, With importunities repeated long To make that duty which had been my
bent,
To dig with strangers alien tombs among

THE FOUR BRIDGES

I let the last day wane the dusk begin Ere I had sought that window lighted from within.

Sinking and sinking, O my heart! my
heart!

Will absence heal thee whom its shade doth rend?

I reached the little gate and soft within The oriel tell her shadow She did lend Her loveliness to me and let me share
The listless sweetness of those features fair

Among thick laurels in the gathering
gloom

Heavy for this our parting I did stand Beside her mother in the lighted room

She sitting, leaned her cheek upon her hand

And as she read her sweet voice floating
through

The open casement seemed to mourn me an adieu.

Youth! youth! how buoyant are thy hopes!
they turn

Like marigolds, toward the sunny side.
My hopes were buried in a funeral urn

And they sprang up like plants and spread them wide;

THE FOUR BRIDGES

Though I had schooled and reasoned them away,
They gathered smiling near and prayed a holiday

Ah, sweetest voice! how pensive were its tones,

And how regretful its unconscious pause!
"Is it for me her heart this sadness owns,
And is our parting of to-night the cause?
Ah, would it might be so!" I thought, and stood

Listening entranced among the underwood

I thought it would be something worth the pain

Of parting, to look once in those deep
eyes,

And take from them an answering look
again

"When eastern palms," I thought,
"about me rise,

If I might carve our names upon the rind, Betrothed, I would not mourn, though leaving thee behind"

I can be patient, faithful, and most fond To unacknowledged love, I can be true

THE FOUR BRIDGES

To this sweet thralldom this unequal bond, This yoke of mine that reaches not to
you
O how much more could costly parting buy—
If not a pledge, one kiss, or failing that,
a sigh!

I listened and she ceased to read she turned Her face toward the laurels where I stood
Her mother spoke—O wonder! hardly learned She said There is a rustling in the wood
Ah child! if one draw near to bid fare well
Let not thine eyes an unsought secret tell.

My daughter there is nothing held so
dear
As love, if only it be hard to win.
The roses that in yonder hedge appear Outdo our garden-buds which bloom within
But since the hand may pluck them every day Unmarked they bud, bloom drop and drift away

THE FOUR BRIDGES

“ My daughter, my beloved, be not you Like those same roses ” O bewildering word !

My heart stood still, a mist obscured my view

It cleared, still silence No denial stirred

The lips beloved, but straight, as one opprest,

She, kneeling, dropped her face upon her mother's breast

This said, “ My daughter, sorrow comes to all,

Our life is checked with shadows manifold

But woman has this more—she may not call

Her sorrow by its name Yet love not told,

And only born of absence and by thought, With thought and absence may return to
nought ”

And my beloved lifted up her face,

And moved her lips as if about to speak,
She dropped her lashes with a girlish grace,

And the rich damask mantled in her cheek

THE FOUR BRIDGES

I stood awaiting till she should deny Her love, or with sweet laughter put it
by

But closer nestling to her mother's heart She, blushing said no word to break my trance,
For I was breathless and with lips apart Felt my breast pant and all my pulses dance,
And strove to move, but could not for the weight
Of unbelieving joy so sudden and so great,

Because she loved me. With a mighty sigh
Breaking away I left her on her knees And blest the laurel bower the darkened sky
The sultry night of August. Through the trees,
Giddy with gladness to the porch I went And hardly found the way for joyful wonderment.

Yet when I entered saw her mother sit With both hands cherishing the graceful head

THE FOUR BRIDGES

Smoothing the clustered hair, and parting
it

From the fair brow, she, rising, only
said,

In the accustomed tone, the accustomed word,

The careless greeting that I always heard,

And she resumed her merry, mocking
smile,

Though tear-drops on the glistening lashes hung

O woman! thou wert fashioned to beguile

So have all sages said, all poets sung She spoke of favouring winds and waiting ships,

With smiles of gratulation on her lips!

And then she looked and faltered I had grown

So suddenly in life and soul a man She moved her lips, but could not find a tone

To set her mocking music to, began One struggle for dominion, raised her
eyes,

And straight withdrew them hachful through surprise

The colour over cheek and bosom flushed I might have heard the beating of her
heart,

But that mine own beat louder when she blushed,

The hand within mine own I felt to
start,

But would not change my pitiless decree
To strive with her for might and mastery

She looked again as one that, half afraid, Would fain be certain of a doubtful
thing

Or one beseeching "Do not me upbraid!"
And then she trembled like the flutter ing

Of timid little birds and silent stood No smile wherewith to mock my hard-
hood.

She turned, and to an open casement moved

With girlish shyness mute beneath my gaze,

And I on downcast lashes unproved

Could look as long as pleased me while the rays

Of moonlight round her she her fair head bent,

In modest silence to my words attent.

How fast the giddy whirling moments flew!

The moon had set, I heard the midnight chime,

Hope is more brave than fear, and joy than dread,

And I could wait unmoved the parting time

It came, for by a sudden impulse drawn,
She, risen, stepped out upon the dusky lawn

A little waxen taper in her hand,

Her feet upon the dry and dewless grass,
She looked like one of the celestial band, Only that on her cheeks did dawn and
pass

Most human blushes, while, the soft light thrown

On vesture pure and white, she seemed yet fairer grown

Her mother, looking out toward her,
sighed,

Then gave her hand in token of farewell,

And with her warning eyes, that seemed to chide,

Scarce suffered that I sought her child
to tell

The story of my life whose every line
No other burden bore than—Eglantine.

Black thunder-clouds were rising up be hind

The waxen taper burned full steadily It seemed as if dark midnight had a mind

To hear what lovers say and her decree Had passed for silence, while she, dropped to ground

With raiment floating wide, drank in the sound.

O happiness! thou dost not leave a trace
So well defined as sorrow Amber light, Shed like a glory on her angel face,

I can remember fully and the sight Of her fair forehead and her shining eyes And lips that smiled in sweet and girlish wise.

I can remember how the taper played Over her small hands and her vesture white

How it struck up into the trees and laid Upon their under leaves unwonted light And when she⁹ held it low how far it spread

O'er velvet pansies slumbering on their bed.

THE FOUR BRIDGES

I can remember that we spoke full low, That neither doubted of the other's
truth,

And that with footsteps slower and more slow,

Hands folded close for love, eyes wet for ruth

Beneath the trees, by that clear taper's flame,

We wandered till the gate of parting came

But I forget the parting words she said, So much they thrilled the all-attentive
soul,

For one short moment human heart and
head

May bear such bliss—its present is the whole

I had that present, till in whispers fell With parting gesture her subdued farewell

Farewell! she said, in act to turn away, But stood a moment still to dry her
tears,

And suffered my enfolding arm to stay

The time of her departure O ye years That intervene betwixt that day and this!
You all received your hue from that keen pain and bliss

THE FOLIO INDEX

(1) I would go and take (1) part to to ask

What I could get and how to get it to get it for a year to get it for a year

The first thing I did was to get it and to get it

It is time to come over now to the summer
to get it

(1) I am to come again and make for
to get it

I am to go and I cannot more really
to get it

But I will make my mind to get it
to get it

With a long over journey ago wide and
to get it

(1) I am to go and I cannot more really
to get it

With a long over journey ago wide and
to get it

With a long over journey ago wide and
to get it

I am to go and I cannot more really
to get it

With a long over journey ago wide and
to get it

I am to go and I cannot more really
to get it

With a long over journey ago wide and
to get it

Unseen above, while comely shepherds
pass,
And scarcely show their heads above the grass

—The red Sahara in an angry glow, With amber fogs, across its hollow-trailed

Long strings of camels, gloomy-eyed and
slow,

And women on their necks, from gazers veiled,

And sun-swart guides who toil across the sand

To groves of date-trees on the watered land

Again—the brown sails of an Arab boat, Flapping by night upon a glassy sea, Whereon the moon and planets seem to float,

More bright of hue than they were wont to be,

While shooting-stars rain down with crackling sound,

And, thick as swarming locusts, drop to ground

Or far into the heat among the sands The gem-brook nations, snuffing up the wind,

THE FOUR BRIDGES

Therefore let memory turn again to home, Feel, as of old, the joy of drawing near, Watch the green breakers and the wind-tossed foam,

And see the land-fog break, dissolve, and clear,
Then think a skylark's voice far sweeter
sound
Than ever thrilled but over English
ground,

And walk, glad, even to tears, among
the wheat,

Not doubting this to be the first of lands,
And, while in foreign words this murmuring, meet

Some little village schoolgirls (with their hands
Full of forget-me-nots), who greeting me, I count their English talk delightful melody,

And seat me on a bank, and draw them
near,

That I may feast myself with hearing
it,
Till shortly they forget their bashful fear, Push back their flaxen curls, and round me sit—

And "Ah!" methought, "how sweetly did it fall, Though but in dream, upon the listening ear!
How sweet from other lips the name well
known—
That name, so many a year heard only from mine own!"

I thought awhile, then slumber came to
me,
And tangled all my fancy in her maze,
And I was drifting on a raft at sea,
The near all ocean, and the far all haze,
Through the white polished water sharks did glide,
And up in heaven I saw no stars to guide
"Have mercy, God!" but lo! my raft uprose,
Drip, drip, I heard the water splash from it,
My raft had wings, and as the petrel goes,
It skimmed the sea, then brooding seemed to sit
The milk-white mirror, till, with sudden
spring,
It flew straight upward like a living thing

THE FOUR BRIDGES

But strange!—I went not also in that flight,
For I was entering at a cavern's mouth Trees grew within, and screaming birds of night
Sat on them, hiding from the torrid south.
On on I went, while gleaming in the dark
Those trees with blanched leaves stood pale and stark.

The trees had flower-buds nourished in deep night
And suddenly as I went farther in They opened and they shot out lambent
light
Then all at once arose a railing din That frightened me "It is the ghosts" I
said,
And they are railing for their darkness fled.

I hope they will not look me in the face;
It frighteth me to hear their laughter loud "
I saw them troop before with jaunty pace
And one would shake off dust that soiled her shroud

THE FOUR BRIDGES

But now, O joy unhopèd¹ to calm my dread,
Some moonlight filtered through a cleft o'erhead

I climbed the lofty trees—the blanchèd
trees—

The cleft was wide enough to let me
through,

I clambered out and felt the balmy breeze,
And stepped on churchyard grasses wet with dew

O happy chance! O fortune to admire!
I stood beside my own loved village spire

And as I gazed upon the yew-tree's trunk, Lo, far off music—music in the night!
So sweet and tender as it swelled and sunk,

It charmed me till I wept with keen delight,

And in my dream, methought as it drew near

The very clouds in heaven stooped low to hear

Beat high, beat low, wild heart so deeply stirred,

For high as heaven runs up the piercing strain,

The restless music fluttering like a bird Bemoaned herself and dropped to earth
again,
Heaping up sweetness till I was afraid That I should die of grief when it did fade.

And it did fade but while with eager ear
I drank its last long echo dying away I was aware of footsteps that drew near And round the ivied chancel seemed to stray
O soft above the hallowed place they trod—Soft as the fall of foot that is not shod!

I turned—'twas even so—yes, Eglantine!
For at the first I had divined the same I saw the moon on her shut eyelids shine And said "She is asleep" still on she came
Then on her dimpled feet, I saw it gleam And thought— I know that this is but a dream."

My darling! O my darling! not the less My dream went on because I knew it such
She came towards me in her loveliness—A thing too pure, methought for mortal touch;

THE FOUR BRIDGES

The rippling gold did on her bosom meet,
The long white robe descended to her feet

The fringed lids dropped low, as sleep-oppressed,

Her dreamy smile was very fair to see,
And her two hands were folded to her
breast,

With somewhat held between them heedfully

O fast asleep! and yet methought she knew

And felt my nearness those shut eyelids
through

She sighed my tears ran down for tenderness—

“And have I drawn thee to me in my sleep?

Is it for me thou wanderest shelterless, Wetting thy steps in dewy grasses
deep?

O if this be!” I said—“yet speak to me,
I blame my very dream for cruelty ”

Then from her stainless bosom she did

Two beauteous lily flowers that lay therein,

THE FOUR BRIDGES

And with slow-moving lips a gesture make As one that some forgotten words doth
win

They floated on the pool " methought she said

And water trickled from each lily's head.

It dropped upon her feet—I saw it gleam Along the ripples of her yellow hair

And stood apart, for only in a dream

She would have come methought to meet me there.

She spoke again— Ah fair! ah fresh they shine!

And there are many left, and these are
mine."

I answered her with flattering accents
meet—

Love they are whitest lilies e'er were blown."

And sayest thou so?" she sighed in murmurs sweet;

I have nought else to give thee now mine own!

For it is night. Then take them love!" said she

They have been costly flowers to thee—and me."

THE FOUR BRIDGES

While thus she said I took them from her hand,
And, overcome with love and nearness, woke,
And overcome with ruth that she should stand Barefooted on the grass, that, when she spoke,
Her mystic words should take so sweet a
tone,
And of all names her lips should choose “My own”

I rose, I journeyed, neared my home, and soon
Beheld the spire peer out above the hill
It was a sunny harvest afternoon, When by the churchyard wicket, standing still,
I cast my eager eyes abroad to know If change had touched the scenes of long ago

I looked across the hollow, sunbeams shone
Upon the old house with the gable ends “Save that the laurel-trees are taller grown,
No change,” methought, “to its grey wall extends

What clear bright beams on yonder lattice shined

There did I sometime talk with Eglantine." tine."

There standing with my very goal in sight,
Over my haste did sudden quiet steal
I thought to dally with my own delight, Nor rush on headlong to my garnered weal

But taste the sweetness of a short delay And for a little moment hold the bliss at bay

The church was open it perchance might
be

That there to offer thanks I might essay Or rather as I think, that I might see

The place where Eglantine was wont to pray

But so it was I crossed that portal wide,
And felt my riot joy to calm subside.

The low depending curtains, gently swayed Cast over arch and roof a crimson glow
But, nevertheless, all silence and all shade It seemed, save only for the rippling flow

Of their long foldings, when the sunset air Sighed through the casements of the house of prayer

I found her place, the ancient oaken stall, Where in her childhood I had seen her
 sit,
Most saint-like and most tranquil there
 of all,
 Folding her hands, as if a dreaming fit—
A heavenly vision had before her strayed Of the Eternal Child in lowly manger laid

I saw her prayer-book laid upon the seat,
 And took it in my hand, and felt more
 near
In fancy to her, finding it most sweet To think how very oft, low kneeling
 there,
In her devout thoughts she had let me
 share,
And set my graceless name in her pure
 prayer

My eyes were dazzled with delightful
 tears—
In sooth they were the last I ever shed,

For with them fell the cherished dream of years.

I looked and on the wall above my
head,

Over her seat there was a tablet placed With one word only on the marble traced.—

Ah well! I would not overstate that woe For I have had some blessings, little care

But since the falling of that heavy blow God's earth has never seemed to me so fair

Nor any of His creatures so divine, Nor sleep so sweet—the word was—
EGLANTINE

A Mother Showing the Portrait of Her Child

(F M L)

Living child or pictured cherub Ne'er o'ermatched its baby grace,
And the mother, moving nearer,
Looked it calmly in the face,
Then with slight and quiet gesture,
And with lips that scarcely smiled,
Said—"A portrait of my daughter When she was a child "

Easy thought was hers to fathom,
Nothing hard her glance to read,
For it seemed to say, "No praises For this little child I need
If you see, I see far better,
And I will not feign to care For a stranger's prompt assurance That the face is fair "

HER CHILD'S PORTRAIT

Softly clasped and half extended
She her dimpled hands doth lay So they doubtless placed them, saying—
 "Little one, you must not play"
And while yet his work was growing
 This the painter's hand hath shown,
That the little heart was making Pictures of its own.

Is it warm in that green valley
 Vale of childhood where you dwell?
Is it calm in that green valley Round whose bournes such great hills
 swell?
Are there giants in the valley—
 Giants leaving footprints yet?
Are there angels in the valley?
 Tell me—I forget.

Answer answer for the lilies,
 Little one, o'er top you much
And the mealy gold within them
 You can scarcely reach to touch;
O how far their aspect differs,
 Looking up and looking down!
You, look up in that green valley—Valley of renown.

Are there voices in the valley Lying near the heavenly gate?

When it opens, do the harp-strings, Touched within, reverberate?
When, like shooting-stars, the angels
To your couch at nightfall go,
Are their swift wings heard to rustle?
Tell me! for you know

Yes, you know, and you are silent,
Not a word shall asking win,
Little mouth more sweet than rosebud, Fast it locks the secret in Not a glimpse upon your present
You unfold to glad my view, Ah, what secrets of your future
I could tell to you!

Sunny present! thus I read it,
By remembrance of my past —
Its to-day and its to-morrow Are as lifetimes vague and vast,
And each face in that green valley Takes for you an aspect mild,
And each voice grows soft in saying—“Kiss me, little child!”

As a boon the kiss is granted Baby mouth, your touch is sweet, Takes the love without the trouble From those lips that with it meet,

Gives the love, O pure! O tender!
Of the valley where it grows
But the baby heart receiveth
MORE THAN IT BESTOWS.

Comes the future to the present—
Ah!" she saith, too blithe of mood Why that smile which seems to whisper—
I am happy God is good ?
God is good that truth eternal Sown for you in happier years,
I must tend it in my shadow Water it with tears.

Ah sweet present! I must lead thee
By a daylight more subdued
There must teach thee low to whisper—
I am mournful, God is good! "
Peace, thou future! clouds are coming Stooping from the mountain crest
But that sunshine floods the valley Let her—let her rest.

Comes the future to the present—Child," she saith and wilt thou
rest?
How long child, before thy footsteps Fret to reach yon cloudy crest?
Ah, the valley!—angels guard it But the heights are brave to see;

HER CHILD'S PORTRAIT

Looking down were long contentment Come up, child, to me "

So she speaks, but do not heed her, Little maid with wondrous eyes,
Not afraid, but clear and tender,
Blue, and filled with prophecies, Thou for whom life's veil unlifted Hangs, whom warmest valleys fold, Lift the veil, the charm dissolveth—Climb, but heights are cold

There are buds that fold within them, Closed and covered from our sight,
Many a richly-tinted petal, Never looked on by the light Fain to see their shrouded faces, Sun and dew are long at strife,
Till at length the sweet buds open—Such a bud is life

When the rose of thine own being Shall reveal its central fold, Thou shalt look within and marvel, Fearing what thine eyes behold,
What it shows and what it teaches Are not things wherewith to part, Thorny rose' that always costeth Beatings at the heart

Look in fear for there is dimness Ills unshapen float anigh.
Look in awe for this same nature
 Once the Godhead delg'd to die.
Look in love, for He doth love it And its tale is best of lore Still humanity grows dearer Being learned the more.

Learn but not the less bethink thee
 How that all can mingle tears
But this joy can none discover Save to them that are his peers And that they whose lips do utter Language such as bards have sung—Lo! their speech shall be to many As an unknown tongue.

Learn that if to thee the meaning Of all other eyes be shown Fewer eyes can ever front thee
 That are skilled to read thine own And that if thy love's deep current Many another's far outflows,
Then thy heart must take for ever LESS THAN IT BESTOWS.

Strife and Peace

PORTFOLIO SOCIETY",
OCTOBER, 1861

The yellow poplar leaves came down
And like a carpet lay,
No waftings were in the sunny air
To flutter them away,
And he stepped on blithe and debonair That warm October day

"The boy," saith he, "hath got his own,
But sore has been the fight,
For ere his life began the strife That ceased but yesternight,
For the will," he said, "the kinsfolk read,
And read it not aright

"His cause was argued in the court Before his christening day, And counsel was heard, and judge demurred,
And bitter waxed the fray,

STRIFE AND PEACE

Brother with brother spake no word
When they met in the way

Against each one did each contend,
And all against the heir
I would not bend, for I knew the end—
I have it for my share
And nought repent, though my first friend From henceforth I must spare.

Manor and moor and farm and wold Their greed begrudged him sore And parchments old with passionate hold They guarded heretofore
And they carped at signature and seal
But they may carp no more.

An old affront will stir the heart Through years of rankling pain
And I feel the fret that urged me yet That warfare to maintain
For an enemy's loss may well be set Above an infant's gain.

An enemy's loss I go to prove Laugh out, thou little heir!
Laugh in his face who vowed to chase Thee from thy birthright fair For I come to set thee in thy place Laugh out, and do not spare.

A man of strife, in wrathful mood
He neared the nurse's door,
With poplar leaves the roof and eaves Were thickly scattered o'er,
And yellow as they a sunbeam lay Along the cottage floor

"Sleep on, thou pretty, pretty lamb," He hears the fond nurse say,
"And if angels stand at thy right hand,
As now belike they may,
And if angels meet at thy bed's feet,
I fear them not this day

"Come wealth, come want to thee, dear
heart,
It was all one to me,
For thy pretty tongue far sweeter rung Than coined gold and fee,
And even the while thy waking smile
It was right fair to see

"Sleep, pretty bairn, and never know Who grudged and who transgressed, Thee to retain I was full fain,
But God, He knoweth best!
And His peace upon thy brow lies plain As the sunshine on thy breast!"

The man of strife, he enters in Looks and his pride doth cease Anger and sorrow shall be to-morrow Trouble, and no release
But the babe whose life awoke the strife Hath entered into peace.
